Poem.

Onward! Onward! is the watch word. That our age and nature give.

C Take it easy 'says the slinegard.

While we live then let us live?"

There have always been some creakers. Ever since the world began. Holding back the hands of workers, Elevating fallen man

Woe betide the ones that Imger, In the vanguard of the van.
And the progress stove to binder,
Of this onward moving clan.

Fogies are there in religion Bearing titles sounding high Who profess to lead to Heaven Souls of men whene'er they die

They tench dogmas that are human For the Gospel's saired truth Aged parents thus are runned And the souls of trusting yout

Music then may be the subject. Toward which our pen's inclined But not music in the abstract -Its effect upon the mind.

Its effect upon the mind.

Ancient Myths tell of two Sirens, Sitting on a rock bound shore. Charming all the passers by them With their songs of ancient love

Wood-nymphs were they -beautious maid ens, On a distant island lone.

Blessed with more than music's resence Almost touching hearts of stone.

History tells us of Ulysses, Much renowned in arms and war, Who was one of Hellen's suitors,

When for her fair hand he sued, That from insult he'd defend her, And the bridegroom whom she loved.

But rejected long before.

When the wife of Menelaus-Helen was her well known name.— Had eloped from Greece with Paris.

At the call of Grecian Princess,

Shepherd-prince of Troja's plain.

O'er the wave of the Ægean. East of Greece as you're aware, In a thousand ancient triremes. Did he lead his host with care.

On the marshy coast of Asia. In the sight of Troy he lands, And the fair but faithless lady, With the voice of war demands.

Then sets out the brave 11h sees For his distant home in Greece, Glad to finish all his wishes, And to rest his arms in peace

Ten years absent from her side, Feeling all that pure affection, Of the newly mairied bride

O'er the sea to sail again ! Oh how high his expectation, Reaching far beyond the main

But the stormy sga arises. And the lofty billous roll. Thunder mutters lightning flashes, From the zenith to the polls.

Now the shins are tossed toward Heaven, On the silver crested wave: Now they sink beneath the level, Failing all their men to raise

Long did thus Ulysses wapder O er the scano seek his home Sad as some rejected lover, When the last of hope is gone,

Now detained and now retarded Now thrown back on some lone shore Ten years more are now departed. Spent and the water's roar

Now be nears the lonely island. Where the Surus sit to sing And the twenty years of absence, Seem to fail to rescue him

While his men guide on the craft. Stops their cars with waxen stoppers, Lest the masic draw them off.

On the warrior's blood stamed heart So great feats of aucient usage May suggest the Molern's part Ancies' myths tell not the real

So lent some effects of music

They imagine ill they speak. But they bid the Moderns wrestle, Such perfection too to seek Locs to progress have been vanquished,

More may still be overcome. What i by man by been accomplished. May by man again be done Ouward hipward thee with Seionie, Music too to it belong a Knowledge over the world most troumph

Pres since the mists of error Floating from the hills of Rome, Were dispersed by Martin Luther Sent by God and his dear Son

Musi constitutes a partion, In the worship of irrakied. Bearing on its wings to Heaven Homize of devoted minds

Music's sweetest trains here soften The asperities of man, While on earth his spirit wanders, Fitting for a better land

But the day is fast approaching, When the Saviour will return, Bidding singers of devotion, Higher, boiler strains to lear

Soon the argol bands descending, Will the judgment seat surround: Soon the trumpet will be sounding. Waking nations under ground. Then the darkened depths of Ocean, Will yield up the wat by dead, And the earthly mounds in motion, Leaping from the coffin a lid.

· Come to judgment!" will be sounding, From th' equator to the polls
"Come to judgment!" ye surrounding Earth of ages, young and old!

Time has ended -judgment's over See on plain and hill top vonder, Holy saints and angel bands!

These are singing -singing --"Glory to the Son of man!"
Hear celestral arches inging,
"Song of Moses and the Lamb."

Such is, then, sweet music's mission, On this sin stained earth of ours, Up to waken by emotions. Man's apostate moral powers.

Here I leave my theme unfinished. Closing this imperfect thyme. Not for matter much diminished, But for simple want of time.

THE MORMON ALPHABET -We have, says the Desert News, containing the Mormons apphabet, which is part of the scheme original ly devised by the Saints to render their community quite exclusive, and to debar all Gentiles and outside barbarans from a too critical surveillance of the internal workings of the State. It consists of thirty eight phonetic characters, a single character in some cases represents an entire word, though more frequently a combination of the characters are required in the orthography. It is in fact quite similar to the system of atenography now employed by newspaper reporters and others. All words having the same pronunciation are spelled alike and the reader or hearer is obliged to depend on the context for a meaning of such words. As each character is designed to represent the sound for which it stands, Mormon word construed into plain English s not the most euphoneous. For instance -"Matthew, sixth chapter." is spelt in the new Alphabet-maetheoo, sexseth cheahptxur which would not by any means pass in our common school spelling classes. A GIANT PREMER -The Rockford Repubtican says that Mr. Jacob Strawn, of Illindis, has carned for himself the reputation of the giant farmer of the West. Twenty-seven years ago he emigrated to that State a poor but continued to increase each year until he has one corn-field in Morgan county nearly onjoy it.
