OR, A DIVIDED HEART AND A DIVIDED LIFE. BY MRS. SOUTHWORTH.

It was early on the morning of a lovely day in June, 1800, that a rather large group of idlers gathered in front of the Ethelidge Arms, a quaint old tavern...

They had not long to wait. The coach soon came thundering up to the door...

Next came forth a young gentleman, whose handsome person and haughty manner at once attracted general attention...

After a slight repast, Colonel Hastings, attended by Cassinove, drove off to the castle to have a preliminary interview with Lady Etheridge...

As the young Italian paced up and down the room occasionally pausing before a full length mirror, which reflected the spacious window...

The impression made upon the enthusiastic heart of Ferdinand Cassinove was at once vivid, deep, and strong...

After the profound bow with which he had returned her courtesy, Ferdinand Cassinove remained motionless where she had left him...

or, out from the will of that royal looking woman.

In the midst of the pleasing pain of his dream the door opened, and a gray haired servant entered softly, and stepping across the room to where the lady sat...

After greeting Col Hastings, as he entered the library, Lady Etheridge took a parchment from a drawer in the centre table, and handed it to her guardian...

After brushing somewhat farther against such noble generosity, the colonel allowed himself to be persuaded to accept the deed, and called in Cassinove to witness its execution...

"Men think me a very fortunate man," said the man who would but mock the name of William Lovell as Albert Hastings, the enrievd bridegroom of the high born Lady Etheridge of Swinburne...

Out so saying, he took his hat, and strolled into the street. Taking a course opposite to that which led to Swinburne Castle, Albert Hastings soon came to a cross-country road...

He had had the cottage furnished, and was that morning to meet Rose there, where they had so often met, by appointment...

And finally, he obtained a promise from Rose that she would meet him at the cottage that same night, where by a previous arrangement, his confidential servant, disguised as a clergyman, was to be in attendance to perform the marriage ceremony...

Fact, Fun and Fancy.

Rising with the birds Getting "high" on a lark. A man recently knocked down an elephant. He was an auctioneer...

There is no arena in which vanity displays itself under such a variety of forms as in conversation. The confidence of nobility of birth has rendered men ignoble...

It is one among the pious and valuable maxims ascribed to Francis de Sales. "A judicious silence is always better than truth spoken without charity."

Growing Old.

If one has a young heart in his left breast pocket, and every thing else gone right with him ever since he can remember...
