BELLEFONTE, THURSDAY, JUNE C.

Precautions-Hints to Farmers. The Legislatures of some of our States have already recommended our farmers to plant this year extraordinary quantities of grain and grass. We hear from various points that this has been and is being done: Nothing should be neglected which will help to make the staple articles of food abundant during the next two years. Our farmers should not only plant large crops of wheat and corn, but they would do well for themselves and for the country to cultivate, to greater than ordinary extent, certain other crops, the products of which are largely consumed by soldiers and sailors

Beans and peas, dried, form an important portion of the army and navy rations. They are only second in importance to bread and meat, and as help to a healthy variation of food, are of equal necessity. Large quanti-tics of these articles will be needed for army providences the variations of the sector of the s provisions, and it is yet time for our farmers cannot too carefully look after the supply of beef. We suggest to our agricultural societies this matter. Many thousand calves are sold and killed every month in this country Our farmers will find it profitable to raise al the increase of their herds during the present year at least; and this is a matter of prudence, by which patriotic stock raisers and cattle owners can do very much to help the cause of the Union, for which our brave soldiers have gone to battle.

Hay, also, should be saved as much as possible. It is an article much needed in all campaigns; and there is little doubt that the operations of the rebels have been embarrassed by the lack of it. The South has always drawn its supply of hay from the Northern and Eastern States. Three months ago there were not five hundred bales of hay in the States held by the mutineers. Great armies cannot be moved without numerous teams, and probably the lack of hay was one not unimportant reason for a certain slow ness of movement on the part of the rebel army, which has surprised our people and alarms the traitors in Virginia

Rebellion will not triumph for lack of patriots to dispute its progress and put it to flight from the land. But an army can do nothing without supplies; and it must be the care of those who remain at home to spare no pains to provide the necessary sup plies for our brethren who are doing battle

The Right time to cut Asparagus.

A Correspondent of the Farmer and Gardner says :- Every lover of Asparagus must deprecate the course pursued by most persons, and market gardeners in particular, in regard to the time of cutting this deliciou vegetable. For many years my impressions were that the whiter and better bleached the stalks, the finer would be the flavor. Besides this, the delicate appearance of a well bleached bunch of asparagus, almost naturally conveys the idea of tendernes and juiciness. Now this is all a mistake as any person may prove by a single experiment. My plan is never cut asparagus until, by exposure to the atmosphere, the stalks have become green over the greater portion of their length. The white or bleached part is generally fibrous or woody and tasteless. I know of no more unpleasant sight at the table than that of a person drawing tough asparagus through his teeth. sucking off such parts as may be tender, and leaving the uneatable parts on or be side his plate. This may all be remedied, by a little precaution in regard to the time of cutting. To have asparagus in full flavor, tender and juicy, it must be cut when the stalks are just sufficiently greened to break off short, like, a snap-short bean. When the crowns have expanded, the proper period is past, for although the whole stalk then becomes green it also becomes fibrous and tough.

It is said, that where it is desirable to have the asparagus retain a fresh green appearance, when served for the table, this can be accomplished by the addition of a very small quanity of saleratus to the water in which it is boiled. I do not offer any of the suggestions in this brief article as novel. They are known to many persons, but very many are not familiar with them. To such they may be acceptable.

A PRETTY WAY OF STEWING CHICKENS.— Parboil two fine chickens, take them up in a pewter dish, cut them up, and separate ill the joint bones one from another, then ake out the breast bone, add a little of the vater they were stewed in, a blade of mace and a pinch of salt, cover closely with anoth-r dish and put it to stew until the fowls are in a pewter dish, cut them up, and separate at all the joint bones one from another, then take out the breast bone, add a little of the water they were stewed in, a blade of mace and a pinch of salt, cover closely with another dish and put it to stew until the fowls are tender -serve hot in the same dish.
