TO AN UNSEEN HAND

ST 630. D. PERNTICE They say, that thou art beauliful, That in thy dark, bright eye There floats a dream of loveliness, Pure, passionate, and high; hey say there is a spell of power Upon thine angel brow, To which, with wild idolatry,

High-thoughted Spirits box Soft as the gush of twilight streams, When the young winds are wandering out On Summer's beatteous eyes, Thine image o'er my spirit seems In Heaven's own light to move, Unwinding all the chains, that bind Thy mystic soul of love.

And oft through slumber's plctured well Thy form, with softened gleam, Smiles like the starlight blue of eve Seen in a sleeping stream , Then on my heart the vision falls So levely and so fair, Such blessed feelings there.

Oh it is passing sweet to muse, With feelings pure and high, On giorious creatures seen alon-By Fancy's burning eye There is no tint of Earth to dim Their holy light with tears, But all is pure and beautiful As dreams of other spheres.

Lady-I know thee not, and those Perchance will never see The stranger-minstrel that now wakes His broken lyre for thee; But oft his heart will picture thee The loveliest of Earth's daughters. A rainbow glery sweetly thrown Upon life's stormy waters.

AFTER ALL

ST WILLIAM WINTER

The apples are ripe in the orchard The work of the reaper is done, And golden woodlands redden In the bleed of the dying sun

Sits pale in his easy chair, While the gentle wind of twilight Plays with his silver hair

A woman is kneeling beside him, A fair young head is prest. In the first wild passion of sorrow Against his aged breast.

And far from over the distance And the rattling roll of drum

And the grandsire speaks in a whisper But we give him to his country And we give our prayers to The

The rose-buds fringe the door And over the grassy orchard " The pink-white blossems pour But the grandsire's chair is empty,

There's a numeless grave in the battle-field. And a new one under the hill And a pallid, tearless weman By the cold hearth sits alone

And the old clock in the corner, Ticks on with a steady drone.

Chaos threatens us, and an "age of their peculiar ceremonies among the rebela iron " that will grind civilized society to powder. We look for help. but where is it? We listen for a directing voice, and there is that he is not willing to fight for silence, or only voices of confusion.

There is a voice yet to be heard, and it is a voice that may bring order out of confusion. It is not the voice of men, but the voice of God, speaking through men.
