Bellefonte January 8th, 1961--tf. A DIALOGUE

John.-Hello' Billy, how are you this morn-Billy.—Fine thank you, how are times with you?

J.—Just tollerable; money's plenty, or rather the paper that is called money now-a-days is plenty, but everything is so intolerably high.—goods of all kinds audi everything excepting grain or what things we farmers have to sell, that a bunch of greenbacks go but slittle ways in supplying ones wants. But how is it Billy, that you always go so neatly dressed, with slothes of such good quality and such excellent as much in the year for clothing as I do, and wat I look like a reagnuntfilm, most of the B .- Well John I cant exactly tell, I'll admit B.—Well John I can exactly tell, I'll admit that you look pretty rough sometimes, and I know you get express many cloths, but perhaps you go to the wrong establishment to make your purphases—wome place where the merchant is not acquainted with the business, and has noth-ing on hand but some "slop shop" stuff, stuck on to him by the charpers in the city. Now if on to him by the charpers in the city. Now if you will take my advice and go to Sternbergs, when you want your next suit, you will know why it is that my clother fit neatly and are always of a good quality.

J.—Burdow, is lithat he can sell clothing cheaper than other merchants about Bellefonts?

B.—Because he makes it his exclusive busi-fonte?

B.—Because he makes it his exclusive business, has been brought to it from boyhood and is connected with one of the largest clothing establishments in the city, where he gets whatever he wants whenever he wants it?

J.—How long have you bought clothes from him?

J.—How long have you bought clothee from him?

B.—Breff since he came to Bellefonte, and let me tell you John, my clothes do not cost me any more new,—everything high as it is, than they did before prices wentup and I bought from men who knew nothing of the business but to put big prices on poor goods.

J.—Well I'll try him, for I have got sick of paying exhorbitant prices for such things as I have been wearing the last, two or three years. If he makes it his business entirely, of course he knows what is good, and I suppose as he has settled down for good, he would offer nothing but the best articles, for lear of spoiling his roputation and injuring his business.

B.—Give him a call when you go to Bellefonte, you will find him just opposite the "Iron Front!" in Mrs. Graffius's Store Room, one of the most obliging, clever fellows you ever seen. He will furnish you snything from a paper collar to the finest kind of a coat, at prices, which for cheapness is perfectly astonishing, and give you a goed clear to smake into the bargain. So good morning John, mind what I've told you, when you want a suit of Slothes.

J.—I will, hand 'the much oblige for the information, I heard others speak very highly of Sternberg, and will try his clothes the next time I go to town. Good morning.
