STANDING ALONE. BY J. B. SWETT.

I'm standing alone on the wive worn shore, Where the wild winds shrick and the surge straining my eyes o'er the seethin For a glimpre of the shore on the other side

There are forms that I know, there are eye that beam
On me at times when I sleep to dream,
There are voices low, and of silvery tone,
That speak to my soul as I stand alone.

There are hearts that heat, there are right that swell.

awell,
And words that carry a witching spell;
There are claspings of hands, there are lip
that meet,
There are lines of joy that those lips repeat. There are troths to plight, there are try-ts keep.—

Harvests of love on the shore to reap,
Meetings of spirit—of heart with heart—
Meeting of souls that never will part. But oh! the billows in anger your Between me here and that happy shore

MARY MOORE.

Our mothers were old playmates and firs cousins My first recollection is of a boy in a red frock and morocco shoes, rocking a cradle in which reposed a sunny-haired boy was myself-Harry Church; that blue

Later, still, I see myself at the little schoolhouse, drawing my little chaise up to the door that Mary might ride home. Many from other boys besides me, liking her, and she, I fear was something of a flirt, even in her pinafores How elegantly the come ng down the steps when I called her how sweetly her blue eyes looked up at me! how gaily Trang out her merry days of my childhood till I grew an awk d, blushing youth-I followed it through the heated noon of manhood -- and now, when "father." I find that the memories of wouth are strong, and that, even in grey bairs, I am following its music still.

When I was fifteen the first great sorrow of my life came upon my heart. I was sent off to echool, at d was obliged to part with Mary We were not to see each other for three long years! This to me, was like a sentence of death, for Mary was like life itself to me.

I left college in all the flush and vigoe of ward and embarrassed I had grown into a tall, slender stripling with a very gooopinion of myself, both an general and par ticular. If I thought of Mary Moore, i was to imagine, how I would dazzle and be wilder her with my good looks and wonder ful attainments-never thinking that she might dazzle and bewilder me still more. I was a coxcomb, I know; but as my youth and good looks have fled, I trust Ilmay be besieved when I say that self conceit has left me also.

An advantageous proposal was made t me at that time, and, accepting it, I gave up all ides of a profession, and prepared to go to the Indies In my hurried visi home of two days I saw nothing of Mary Moore. She had gone to a boardidg school at some distance, and was not expected me till the following May I uttered on sigh to the memory of my little blue eyed playmate, and then called myself a mai

"In a year," I thought as the vehicle whirled away ofrom our door, "In a year or three years at most I will return, and if Mary is as pretty as she used to be, why perhaps then I may marry her "

And thus I settled the future of a young lady whom I had not seen for four venrs I never thought of the possibility of her re fusing me-never dreamed that she could

But now I know that, had Mary met me then, she would have despised me. Per haps in the scented and affected student she night have found plenty of sport; but as for leving me, or feeling the slightest in
