THE FARMONS .-- We know there is noth by most of our lady readers-slibough thete is much that might be of more benefit to them-than a description of the fash ious for next mouth, which we get from one of the Metropolitan Fashion Journals. According to it, the prettiest costumes to be seen as yet upon the streets, are the summer silk suits, chene, or stripped in nar row lines in two colors. A white and li lac stripe, for instance dress and sac, i ing color, and worn over a white mohail

Another very protty suit is composed of mouse colored cuene silk, dotted with rolneaux or nation tolds of mouse effored sat-in, dotted with natic opaque beads. This is worn over a fluted skirt

There is a delicate chene poplin, and a very silky material, made of silk and lines. both of which are introduced for traveling dress purposes, but through very pretty, they are not equal for service to the poor mohair, which will stand all sorts of weathor without shimking.

A novelty in summer black gilk clock and sacs is the introduction of color int the triuming.

"Reins are as fashionable as ever, bu they are now worn without loops, and quite requently simulated by an embrodiery at are finished with fringe

The short idresses are found great for country wear, and ladies are adopting them universally for this Janpose and for travelling. Nothing so comfortable or con-dress and reception purposes are really smaller than ever, and very generally of the fanction shape. They are merely little triangles of lace, or white crape. laid in blue vetvet bandesu, a little fine blonde, brouze leaves

Dresses are still cut very narrow, and with long trains, four yards and a half is considered sufficiently with round the bot-tom for a trained dress, and three and a half for a short drass

Drosses not full goved are gathered at the back. We have said several times, and repent again, that under skirts must either be gored, or made very narrow at the top, and with a deep flounce at the bottom : essential to the good appearance of the
