New Application of an Old Tale.

We recollect to have read, in a weird Arabian romance, of an honest fisher man who drew a copper chest from the sea in his net. Thinking he had secured a rich prize, he made haste to force i open when a great mist rushed forth and spread itself over everything in the vicinity, but changed gradually into the form of a large and savage giant, who form of a large and savage giant, who ling to place in the seat once occupied had been imprisoned by order of the great Solomon, in the copper chest seal d with his seal, and cast into the sea He immediately threatened the life of his preserver, informing him that he had about him than would induce him to bound himself by a great oath to destroy whomever should release him from his onfinement. The poor fisherman, at first overwhelmed with terror, mutely eeched for the life which had given liberty to the monster which confronted him, but finding all entreaty vain, he re sorted to strategem to get his huge assail ant once more safely under the great seal of Solomon. He said he thought his fate was hard indeed, but as it was nlainly inevitable, he would submit cheerfully if the huge shape would ex plain to him how it had been packed in a box now no larger than one of its feet, and concluded by saying that he did no believe the story about the long impris onment in the copper box. To satisfy before destroying him, the shape slow! dissolved once more into mist and grad ually crept into the old place of confine ment. The moment this was done, th isherman closed the chest suddenly, and Solomon's seal made it as secure as ever. Of course there was raving and threatening and cursing on the part of the entrapped giant; but it availed nothing, work for a living or allow them to starve and the fisherman took care to secure himself in the future from the danger he had so narrowly escaped.

The American people, many years ago drew out of some puritanical pool a something smaller and more contemptible than the copper chest of the Eastern romance. It was easierly opened by the curious ones who found it, and its deadly vapors spread over the whole land. or years and years they gathered solid ity and strength, until they assumed the shape of a huge, and savage, and bloody nster, which threatened, not only the monster, which threadened, are who had eratic principles. Place hunting, popular the principles and the principles are the principles. turned it loose upon us, but proceeded at once to destroy and break to pieces e government of our fathers and to bathe its monstrous hands in the blood of their children. The ohest from which it had been drawn would not now have contained one of the huge limbs which so blindly and savagely dealt destruction on all they could reach. For seven long and awful years it strode over the land. and every human being in the country felt the curse of its presence At length the afflicted people roused themselves, got it once more into the limits which it had escaped, closed the lid upon it, and we trust in God it may never be opened er of those whom he cannot represent more until those responsible for its pres. ice among us are called to answer at the Great Tribunal for their crunes.

It ought not to be difficult for the people of this country to trace the parallel When our fathers made this government they confined the spirits of Abolitionism and despotism securely and and sealed them with the great seal of the Constiprompted by curiosity and partizan feeleagerly opened it to secure the within escaped, and remained at large, nied such narrow limits. They pretended to doubt whether the party which had got to calling itself the Union party, and which profassed such love for those whose lives and jit would be just as competent a Presihappiness it continually threatened, and dent such veneration for the government it had broken down and overturned ; had ever occupied the miserably narrow and the Union and the flag, and love for the beasty blacksmoors in whose cause it and other Statos that hold their elections on the 5th inst, show much larger Demhad gotton up a fearful war. The people, like the fisherman, agreed to die in pated. New York, in place of giving peace if the threatening monster, with jaws dripping-human blood, would but more. Lake the giant of the story, the ate and House of Representatives, elevmonster, though very terrible, was very foolish, and the Mongrel party took Cuffee to its bosom. demanded social and political equality for him, cursed and of a majority, and on joint ballot in the spit upon the institutions of the country as in the days of yore, and so presented itself in the same narrow and contemptible position in which it first appeared. Thank Heaven, the American people, in the elections of this year, have completod the parallel. The chest has been slosed by their hand and sealed with the great seal of the Constitution, we trust forever. Of course the imprisoned monster will swear and bluster and breaten; but let us but keep the lid tightly closed and the great seal unbroken, and, relieved from all fear for the future, we may set about healing the wounds of the past, and bringing the fragments of our Union once more into proper position.

The "Age" and Grant. If General Grant were a pulitical strategist, there is a movement which he could make which would ensure him visiory. Let him, re-serving full latitude to himself as to recom-struction and sympachy with Congress, and all that, simply and briefly asy, using his even tongue to say it with, "I am not in favor of as "gro sufpremacy in the South. We were hardly prepared to see an idea, such as the above, advanced by the paper that wants to be the leading organ of the Democratic party in this State. Enter state -There seems to be something for ancient Isreal. Our struggle for independence lasted seven years, and our great struggle against Mongrelism lasted the mane length of time. It is signifi-CARL.

The deg Forney is not so fortunate as the poor man's dog in Burns' poem. In spite of all the demonstrations of Badical affection he can make to GRANT the latter will not.
