Which Was it?

It seems to be a matter of some con troversy among some of our cotemporaries whether the late victory was won by the Democracy or by the conservatives. We confess we were some what surprised that professedly Democratic papers, which lent their aid nobly in the late struggle, should now be willing to attribute our success to the help we got from the conservatives, and not to the down r.ght, manful, Democratic blows dealt by our own people. If we had succeeded last year, we It we had succeeded last year, we gro supremacy. The intention with the all extra the two and the succeeded last year, we had been at all suprised at which each individual soldier fought had the allegation that it was a victory of JOHNSON and the office holders and office Seekers , for our leaders condescended to use so mean a weapon as that, thon, and luckily enough for our party. we were defeated. But we were well siti-fied this year that we had achieved a most brilliant, old fashioned Democratic success, and if we received any assistance from those known as JONHSON men, they came to our party, the party did not ge We are ready to admit that to them. we had the votes of many who formerly voted with the opposition, but we are unable to distinguish, so far as results are concerned, a man who voted his first Democratic ticket in 1867 from one who has been all his life a Democrat. Changing Base. There is nothing more funny surely nothing more remarkable, than the sudden-ness with which certain haders of the "Radical Republicans" have changed their base and gone over to the "Conservatives" The recent elections appear to have worked a marvellous metamorphosis in this respect Just after the recent balloting in Pennsyl-vania, Mr Forney printed in one of his "two papers, both daily"-the Preze-a-long editoral article, double leaded and oc-cupying quite three columns, in which, af-ter affecting to laugh at the voice of the people as a delusion and a shame, and re-sserting megro suffrage and equality is a vital and central principal of the Republi-can party, he declared -we use his own words--tree will take no stop bal succeds'."
