STONEWALL JACKSON.

The following beautiful tribute to this most gallant chieftan of this or any other day is from he New York Citizen, and said to have been written by an officer of the l'nited States Navy He sleeps, all quietly and fold, Beneath the soil that gave him birth Then break his battle-brand in twain And lay it with him in the earth.

No more at midnight shall be urge. His tollsome march among the pines, Nor hear upon the morning air. The war shout of his charging lines.

Cold is the eye whose meteor gle in Flashed hope on all within its light. And still the voice that, trumpet toned, Itan through the servied ranks of fight.

No more for him shall cannons park, Or tents gleam white upon the plain And where his camp-fires blazed envorce Brown reapers laugh amid the grain!

No more above his narrow bod Shall sound the trend of marching feet, The ride volley and the crash Of sabres when the forman meet

And though the winds of Autumn race, And Winter snows fall thick and deep Above his breast, they can not move The quiet of his dreamless sleep.

We may not raise a marble shaft Above the heart that now is dust, But Nature, like a mother fond, Will no'er forget her sacred trust Young April, o'er his lowly mound Shall shake the violeta from her hair, And glorious June, with reverened kirs, Shall bid the roses blossom there.

V
And round about the drening bees,
With drowsy hum shall come and go
While west winds, all the liveleng day
Shall murmur dirges soft and low.

The warrior's stormy fate is o'er'
The undright gloom has passed away:
And, like the glory from the East,
Breaks the first light of Freedom's day

And white-winged Peace, o'er all the land, Broads like a days upon her nest.

Broods like a dove upon her nest. While iron war with slaughter gorged, At length hath laid him down to rest

And where we won our onward way With fire and steel, thro' yonder wo The blackbird whistles, and the qual Gives answer to her timel broad. Yet oft in dreams his fierce brigade Shall see the form they followed far, Still leady than the furtherest van— A langulark in the clouds of war.

And oft when white haired grandsires tell Of bloody struggles past and gone. The children at their knees shall hear How Jacason led his columns on.

SPEECH OF GENERAL MORGAN AT CINCINNATI--THE TRUE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT

On Friday evening 5th ult, General Geo W. Morgan addressed the Democracy of Hamilton county, in Cincinnati, The conoluding remarks of the General, as approprinte as eloquent, we give below. They loves his country and his fellow man. He

We are countrymen. The same heroic blood courses through our veins, and the same destiny awaits us the section can not remain from while the other is enslaved Wisdom and patriotism can make sur coun try more glorious, more prosperous and happy than ever before. The brave respect the brave Respect to the only solid basis of affection . It is stronge, indeed, that we should have so lucte known each other prior to the war. And one of the most valuable lessons it has tought in, that Americans, without regard to section or party, are herotomen. And when anital the din of arms one or the other flag went down andid be forgiven our sine as we forgive those the red storm of bittle, the defeated party had still the proud satisfaction of knowing that in either event. Americans were victorious - hat now but Americans could have conquered And had our troubles been left to a council of soldiers, representing the two great armies, the war would brave respect the brave And such a counoil of heroes would have proved that there is more wisdom in the aspiration of undel fish patriotism than in the cold and heart less calculations of the more politician But while the sol her fought, the politican schoned, and the bloody work of war went or But thank God the crimson mist has at length cleared away from the field of bat-But is no one to die? Is no blood to be land. I said that the people of the North and South were countrymen, and we must be the five hundred thousand Southern be friends. In by-gone years it was more than once my fortune to see Northern and Southern regiments battling a common enc South Carolina well and bravely fought side by side, and the blood of their heroes mingled togother Aye, my countrymen, the blood of the braves of Ohio, Indiana and ed in mourning for the loved ones who slum Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, New Eng ber in defeat beneath the cruison sod land and lowa, formed crimson currents on men of the sunny South-of Mississippi and Georgia, of Kentucky and Tennessee,

England love us . Do the crowned heads of Europe desire the restoration of our Union are the living monuments of the blight of and the perpetuity of free institutions 7 It is not inevitable that somer or later we imust be forced to join the battle with allied Europe" And when that hour comes, as come it will, shall we be any stronger for is still red with brother s blood, by brothhaving made the heroic people of ten States ers shed. Oh, then, let us stanch the gaphereditary enemies? If the Confederacy were able to fight us during four long and bloody, though glorious years, what would be the result of a war in which the Confederacy and allied Europe were combined against us? During the late war, the Confederate States had no just cause of war and had their cause been just, they could not have been conquered. Let us then beware, my countrymen, how we put ourselves in the wrong-let us pause before we give the South a sacred cause of future war, and bring upon our selves the curses of mankind. Let there be no Peland, no Hungary no Ireland in America. But rather let our statesmen emulate the magnanimity of our soldiers, and by their wisdom command the gratitude and admiration of prosterity.

"Welcome, sweet day of rest ' No books to post, no orders to fill, no projects to think over, no politics to discuss-none of the thousand worrying, temper trying heart-worrying cares of the every day world, to day One day of quiet and tranmility - conblems of eternal rost "

How sweetly comes the peace of the Sabath morning after the toils and agitators of the week ' Balmy as odors of spicy groves, gently as the breath of sleeping infants, or the dying ginds of evening; pure as the meanse that rives be-fore the throne of God comes the calm of his holy morning, "lay of all the week the best." It is the day of home-bome hushed and quiet, home peaceful and full of comfort. To day the father is at home.and the mother with brow free from week day carre, tits beside him; and memories of the Sublath in by gone time, when sly love made the day of repose a time of joy, come back in all their pleasantness Father is at home, and the little ones hang at his knee, telling their joys and troubles of the past week, and rejoicing that for a whole day he will be in their company, and lavwords and smiles.

Aye, pure, sweet and holy is the day of cest in the family; but it is all too brieftrastent as the outline of the silvery vapor moil of the troubling world will come back to morrow Let not that thought mar the gentle joy of this sweet day; remember, rather there is a "home" whose peace is never interrupted, whose joy is never breken, whose repose dreads not to-morrow.and that a part of the privileges and happiness of to-day is to secure a place in that family whose circle is united forevermore, in our
