[For the WATCHWAN A SOLACE.

BY W. J. ARNEY,

Weep no more for him for your darling ange child

For a heav'nly voice 'twas called him he fied and sweetly smiled

And he's only gone before you in the sunny realma to ream There he'll wait until your coming shout your welcome home

Weep no longer mother for him though he stayed but a little while Death released him from earth' sorrow its fair deluding guile Yes he fled ere guilt could darken his pure soul and cherub form

Closed was your ephem'ral flower ere feit a storm

Weep no longer mother for him no he feels not that 'tis cold Warmer far than summer's sunshine are the fields in Jesus' fold And your "darling lamb" is playing by the unny river' side

Where he drinks from that pure fountain whence fllow streams in living tide

Weep no longer mother for him yes vo! darling surely lives Tis alone his body moulders in the tomb your fond heart grieves Bright in yonder realms of glory soars his spirit pure and free And a gently whispers to you mother not for me"

Weep no longer mother for him you wil miss him oft fig true
In your arms when he was folded there many joys for you
But in yonder H av'nly Ed'n now he rests an angel fair.
And you'd ask not to recall him could you know the pleasure there Weep no longer mother for him for you darling angel boy When he fled his Saviour called him to brighter-world of Joy Mother listen now he calls you "when this gloomy life is o'er Wo'nt you come and meet me mother then we'll part oh never more
