

To the People of the Northern States.

We insert with great pleasure the following address of citizens of Northern birth, now residing in our vicinity, and ask for it a calm and careful perusal by the people of all sections of the country.

The undersigned, men of Northern birth, are settled in the South with our families, their fortunes and a bright future in the future. They came here, trusting for protection to their country, the guaranty contained in the Constitution of the United States, that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to the same privileges and immunities as those of the several States.

When resistance in the South to the authority of the Federal government had been effectually subdued, when the Southern soldiers had surrendered and gone back to their homes, under the pledge that so long as they remained quiet and obeyed the laws, they would be unmolested.

There can be but one answer. The party which controls the legislation of Congress (calling itself Republican) exerts its powers not in restoring those States to the Union on the principles of the Constitution, but in reconstructing it as it is termed, society itself in each of them, and so refraining their political strength may be counted and used to secure its own ascendancy.

That the people of the North, with the full power to end a state of things so monstrous, still permit it to endure, is due solely to the persistent misrepresentation of the real condition of the people of the South, their feelings, purposes and wishes, used to fan and keep alive the fires of passion and resentment engendered by the war, which, else for want of fuel to feed on, had died out, and expired in its ashes.

It was in the power of the Radical leaders to have established their party, so that, hereafter, it might have been a honor, instead of a disgrace, to be hailed as one of the Radical party. But it required something which does not seem to constitute any part of their nature. It demanded magnanimity.

Now, nothing can save the Radical party, because their meanness, their selfishness, their utter disregard of all sacred obligations, and their base attempts to destroy the Constitution, are all put to rest, and none but men of their own mean stamp will hereafter applaud their wicked acts.

Again, the people are warned in this address against a party which, should it attain power, can only retain it by "seducing to rebel" demands, first of which is the repudiation of the national debt, and the payment of the "rebel debt."

The Mongrel in New Hampshire.

It is whispered—nay, it is more than whispered—by some of the despotic wretches, that, come what will, the present infamous dynasty which has for eight years so miserably cursed the country, shall be perpetuated.

It is true, that the Mongrel of New Hampshire, who, by his presence, has given a free expression of opinion at the ballot boxes, is not known that the rabal at Washington have organized the Grand Army of the Republic, secretly.

When the great trial of the Rump party, which history will pronounce upon in its account, rises to show the black and red leader to worship at the shrine of the golden calf, he has expressed his determination to rule on all points of law that may arise during the impeachment trial, and notwithstanding the bluster and threats of the Rump leaders, has adhered thus far to that determination.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

A Startling Thought.

It is whispered—nay, it is more than whispered—by some of the despotic wretches, that, come what will, the present infamous dynasty which has for eight years so miserably cursed the country, shall be perpetuated.

It is true, that the Mongrel of New Hampshire, who, by his presence, has given a free expression of opinion at the ballot boxes, is not known that the rabal at Washington have organized the Grand Army of the Republic, secretly.

When the great trial of the Rump party, which history will pronounce upon in its account, rises to show the black and red leader to worship at the shrine of the golden calf, he has expressed his determination to rule on all points of law that may arise during the impeachment trial, and notwithstanding the bluster and threats of the Rump leaders, has adhered thus far to that determination.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

There was only one way by which the Radical party could have saved itself from the popular condemnation which has come upon it, and which will continue to grow and increase to the end of the chapter, and that way they refused, or were too mean to attempt.

The Carpet-Bag Brigade.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era. You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era. You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era. You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era. You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era. You find them everywhere. On the cars, and in the towns, and prowling about in country places, and you can take up a paper, hardly, or hear a man speak, but what there is something about the carpet bagger.

The German Government and Extraterritoriality.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

The treaty between the government of Northern Germany and the United States, which declares and guarantees the right of extradition is the first step in the adoption of the practice here, which must become universal.

Hon. George W. Wood.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.

There is a class of political adventurers prowling through the South, watching chances to become famous as Judges, Congressmen, etc. of the new era.