JOHN BILLINGS GOOSE PARK.—The goose is a grass animal, but don't chase her out.

They are good liverers; about one aker to a goose is enough, altho' there is some folks who think that one goose to 175 akers is neater rite.

These two calculations are so far apart that it is difficult to tell now what will finally win.

But I don't think if I had a farm of 175 akers and paid for, that I would sell it for half what it was worth, just because I didn't have any geese upon it.

Geese stay well, some of our best biographers says seventy five years and grow tuff to the last.

They lay one egg at a time about the size of a goose egg in which the young gosling lies hid. The gosling is the goose's babe.

The geese don't suckle its young, but turns them out to pasture on some body's vacant lot.

They seem to lack wisdom, but are considered sound on the goose.

They are good eating but not good chewing; the result of this remains a profound secret to this day.

When a female goose is at work hatching she lies hard by to place; she rises clear to from the bottom in a minute and will fight a yoke of oxen if they show her the least bit of snob.

The goose is an excellent bird for its feathers; which she sheds every year by the hundreds.

A Doctor was very much annoyed by an old lady who always stopped him on the street to tell him of her ailments. Once she met him when he was in a great hurry. "Hi, I see you are quite fat," said the doctor. "Shut your eyes and show me your tongue." She obeyed, and the doctor moving off left her standing there some time in this ridiculous position, to the infinite amusement of all who witnessed the funny scene.

There is nothing purer than honesty; nothing warmer than love; nothing more bright than virtue; and nothing more steadfast than faith. These united in one mind form the purest, the sweetest, the richest, the highest, the holiest and the most steadfast happiness.

If we would have powerful minds we must think; if we would have faithful hearts, we must love; if we
