-We have lately learned the particulars of a duel that took place just outside of the borough limits, a short time age. The parties to it were a couple of school boys, who undertook to ape the "manhood" of the "code of honor" in order to settle a dispute as to looking somewhat anxious, which of the two was best settled in the __Wet_day on Tuesda affections of a sweet young girl, who, because she is as modest as she is sweet, preach in the Reformed church of this and had nothing to do with the silly place on Sunday morning and evening, proceedings of her boyish admirers, shall be nameless here. But we intend to give the names of the two chivalrous with the greenest of green fruits—chola show, of courage, to establish their elfim to the favor of the fair girl. One of thom was a son of our late President Judge, "Jim" Linn, and the other a boy by the name of Irvin Hagerman These two, not being able to live happily together in the "wide, wide world," on account of the fair disturber of their dreams, vowed to meet upon the bloody -Wolearn that Mr. John Cook, of battle field, and wipe each other out of "seconds," repaired to the solemn ground. The terms of the duel were that two pistols should be loaded, one with powder and ball and the other with powder only, and lots were to be drawn for choice of pistols and the first shot Linn was the lucky "man," and dence having chosen his pistol and taken his position, at the word, he hanged away going repairs. at Hagerman, who, whatever might have been his feelings, did not fall, nor was he hurt in the least. vy, July 1st. To say that it was an entire success, would be to say little The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, and quite as many were obliged a disjetthe repairs for the lowkeys a chrom to remain out of door's For three full hours, the audience were kept in a literary revolution-drinking deep the inebruating draught of fertile genius. The exercises consisted of lectures, orations, declamations, dialogues, original essays and tableaux, interspersed with musicinstrumental and vocal. Space will permit mention of but few of the performances. The Zion string band was in attendance, and under the leadership of Cyrus Gordon, Esq , formed a very interesting feature in the exercises. The band produced music sicrete, than the strains of an Eolian harp, or Arcadian songs,-and while Miss Harris conducted the class in vocal music, the audience was held in cuphonius rapture. Our talented young friend, J. L. Twitmyer delivered a very eloquent oration on, "The true end of education." He evinced the most profound thought, and depth of reseach was not wanting. He concluded by taking a summary view of the field of ethics as connected with education. Dr. P. L. Fisher lectured on, "Air and its relations to life," in which he exhibited no small amount of knowledge in physiological science. In his lecture he brought a large body of facts and principles within the narrowest compass of lucid presentation. After the above lecture a song was sung by Miss Bello Rupert in connexion with a bar-room scene. In this song the grief of many a mother's and daughter's heart, was vividly depicted :- a shade of sorrowful audience. A number of very interesting essays were read by the ladies on various tonics of the day-all were remarkably well rendered. The celebrated, neatly-dressed funny German orator. Prof. Rodenhauser, was then introduced: who, while spoulding, kept the audiente in a perfect out burst of laughter. After concluding the address, he valled on

In his conclusion he said, "May you never be allowed to want anything pertaining to your happiness and success in life is our paramount wish, and may you never be visited by the dark clouds of adversity is our desire. When your souls shall be freed from the frail tenements of clay,-may they ride over oblivious roaring waters in chariots triumphant, and in the immensity of space cap the climax of your mission by entering into rest eternal. With so much we bid you a reluctant farewell." The exercises were continued till about 12 o'clock, when all retired highly clated. The literary tact and talent of the young ladies and gentlemen of Zion is not inferfor to that of surrounding vicinities; this was plainly
