

popularity with our people, should be nominated as the present incumbent be the Republican candidate, it will take a vast amount of work to save the party from utter defeat. There are not in this county a dozen prominent Republicans who desire to see Henry re-nominate. The party has had quite enough of him already, and if the Convention be wise and desire to see the Republican banner carried to victory in October, some other standard-bearer than the HUMBURG WHO NOW FILLS THE OFFICE WILL BE PUT IN NOMINATION.

[From the same, May 11th, 1869.]
GOVERNOR GEARY MAKES A "TEN STRIKE."
 Governor Geary has done another good thing in the exercise of his authority as Chief Executive of the State. He has pardoned Mr. W. J. Robinson, who a couple of weeks since was sent to the penitentiary because of a little "omniplausibility" with Manager Smythe, and we suppose he considers himself certain now of receiving the "undivided support" of Allegheny county in the coming State Convention; for, after such a wise and judicious exercise of the pardoning power, who will pretend to say that he is not "the right man in the right place?" Geary is, no doubt, a model Governor in all respects, eloquent, truthful and conscientious, yet W. J. PITY THE PARTY THAT MUST CARRY HIM IN THE COMING CAMPAIGN.

AFTER THE CONVENTION
 The Convention might have nominated a much stronger man. As it is, however, nothing that we may say can remedy the mistake. [Dispatch, June 24th.]

Such an endorsement as is contained in the above is not flattering to the Radical candidate for Governor. What hope has he when even his own party friends desert him?

[The following extracts, from a curious old blackletter book, entitled "The Lawes Provisions for Women, Printed by the Assignment of John More, Esquire 1527—setting forth the regulation of women in England in Queen Elizabeth's time, and the public feeling concerning them very accurately, will doubtless be of little interest to the lady readers of the WATERMAN.]

Women have no voice in Parliament. They make no laws, they consent to none, they dispose none. All of them are under the power of their husbands, and their decisions are subject to their husbands. A woman has "divers special cares" in the matters of marriage and guardianship. At seven years of age, her father shall have the care of her persons to marry her; at nine she is able to deserve and have power, at twelve, to consent to marriage; at fourteen, to have her goods, at sixteen, she is free to choose for herself, also free to enter into the enjoyment of her own lands, and at twenty she is able to make a bequest. At fourteen a woman was held to be marryable, because able to order and dispose, to have the key of her privy, and to be a jolly stay to a man. By a statute made 5 Eliz. chapter 4, "Two justices of the peace in the county, or the head officer and 2 Burgesses in Cities, &c. may appoint any woman of the age of twelve years, being unmarried and out of service, to serve and be retained by years, week, or day, in such sort and for such wages, as they shall think most, and if she refuse they may commit her to prison till she shall be bound to consent." In those old days, betrothal was a more serious matter than it is now—some think like the present German betrothal. It was considered the first part of the marriage, and was of two kinds: the first plain and simple, the second binding themselves to contract matrimony hereafter, the second, when an oath was made of some time taken as in earnest or pledge on both sides, while pledge or gifts were not returned, a second marriage was not permitted, because it is in some sort dangerous to expect long the true nature of an about young couple, the civil law did ordain that after a husband had been gone five years, and nothing known whether he lived or no, the wife may marry again. If an officious fellow-time acquaintance will say I was a live, I talk of marriage, but I am not so far wide. Stay awhile yet, I pray you. I know many an honest woman more repenting her hasty marriage she had made, than all the other things that ever she committed. It were good nature to speak a little of wooing, out to handle that matter per quins of species would take up as much room as an Italian flagge they every third whereof where it felleth to the ground growth to a woof. A woman, as soon as she is married, as if it were, veiled, clouded, overshadowed, and continually under the power of her husband. Brae on terms her under the sceptre of her husband, her new self is her superior, her companion her master. The "mastership she has fallen into may be called "femina accitata," and she must take the name of her husband. Also Geom becomes Altra Musgrave. What get in the morning was fair weather, is at night perhaps Rainbow or Goodwife Foale, Sweetheart going to church and Husbands' coming home. The rest follows "Justin Brooke attemeth plainly that if a man has an outlaw, a traitor, a Page, his villain, or his wife, it is dishonourable, because of the law common these persons can have action, God send gentlemen better sport or better company." "A wife, how gallant soever she be, glisteth not in the riches of her husband, as the morne hath no light but in the sunne."

— A Milwaukee servant girl went to a gipsy to have her fortune told, and it was done with such truth that she actually discarded an honest lover to run off with a young man with black hair, who plundered her of her earnings and despoiled her the next day.

— At the Illinois Female Suffrage Convention last week, Mrs. Livermore said that any man who proposed marriage to Anna Dickinson would "get soundly snubbed." Anna probably told her so.
