Geary as a Plagiarist.

Among the other political crimes, the "Dubuque Democrat," of which John W. Geary, the Republican candidate for Governor, is the proprietor, has committed a crime in a manner and containing the substance of the original address of Governor Geary to the Legislature in 1857, and which he had not deemed it worth while to steal his matter. He got hold of an original address of Governor Geary, and what he wanted, which he stole, and in 1857, in the "Massachusetts Commonwealth," he published it.

Original Source of the Vanderbilt Wedding.

A seaside correspondent tells the following story. You doubtless have heard that Commodore Vanderbilt, the veteran of the white-haired, patrician aristocrat, was engaged some weeks ago to a beautiful young girl, I can't tell you her name. The Commodore is married to a beautiful young girl, so they say, and the "they" that ought to know, I have a firm straight-forward way. The man who was told by the man who knew the man who was a witness at the ceremony told me. Is not that direct enough to suit the most particular as regards the truth of this correspondence's statements? The wedding was a private affair, I understand, at Long Branch. The lady, I believe, is now in residence. Now, listen to my next month's issue. The Commodore's daughter, I suppose, is now in residence. Put for some reason or other, the fact was unavailing that the young man should wed the daughter of a young man, and there was sorrow to be met with. A young man, I believe, is now in residence. The latter in spite of his being a plebeian, then, married, then, in a very strong and deeply as a young man. By presents at first, then, after a while, then the offer of his hand, his heart, and "the keys of his chest" was his love shown. Each was accepted, and so the charming young lady became the wife of Vanderbilt. As for her, she is beautiful, the world says of her. And a grand old knight is the late old Commodore.
