

The Democratic Watchman.

BELLEVILLE, PA. Friday Morning, February 4, 1870.

THINGS ABOUT TOWN & COUNTY.

Court adjourned on Wednesday. For handsome women, Belleville is famous.

A good girl can hear of an easy situation by applying at this office.

The face of the town clock continues unreadable as ever. Can we not have it repaired?

Down with the rents! This is the cry that tenants are just now indulging in.

The Pine Hill string band gives a concert at Waddle's School House tonight, (Friday.)

An adjourned court will be held on the 8th of March, for the purpose of hearing motions and arguments. There will be no jury trials.

Among the callers at our sanctum on Wednesday, we had the pleasure of meeting Gen. Buchanan and Judge Allison.

Our friend, Mr. Frank Brown, of Centre Furnace, has killed the biggest hog of the season. It weighed, when dressed, 598 pounds.

The celebrated Potter Will case, that was to come before Court on Monday last, "flashed in the pan," and a non-suit was taken, which ends the matter for the present.

Quite exclusive—the ladies of the M. E. and Presbyterian churches, of this place, who prohibit men from attending their series of prayer meetings. It is hardly necessary to state that but few of the single sisters attend.

The foreman of the National office had a boy baby—we don't mean that, exactly, but there was one in the family—the other night. As a consequence he—we mean the foreman, not the baby—feels several inches taller.

The Band serenaded the Cummings House, on Tuesday night last, after "Gander Legs" had gone to bed. "McCracken," supposing, of course, that it was all meant for him, and being a little under some somnolent influence, roused himself hurriedly, and bounced out on to the balcony, in his short clothes, where he made them a speech. Hooley for McCracken!

A lecture will be delivered in the Court House, on Saturday evening, the 13th inst., by the Rev. M. Officer, for the benefit of the Lutheran church, the proceeds to be applied to the extinguishment of the debt. Subject: "The Manners and Customs of Western Africa." Mr. Officer has been a missionary to that region, and is well qualified to make an interesting address.

A very interesting temperance address was delivered in the Court House, on Wednesday evening last, by Rev. Joseph Nesbitt, pastor of the Presbyterian congregation at Lock Haven. The audience was large and listened with great attention to Mr. Nesbitt's powerful portrayal of the evils of drunkenness. On Wednesday evening next, the Presbyterians will attempt the formation of a temperance society in connection with their church, and all interested in the temperance movement are cordially invited to attend. The Young Men's Christian Association have thrown out the suggestion that a society of this kind be formed by every congregation in town—an idea that will in all probability be acted upon.

Saw a man come down town on Monday morning last, with his coat tail on fire. His wife was immediately behind him, and as she noticed the "smoke of his torment" ascending upward, she gave the alarm, when the husband reached his hand back into his pocket with a shy suspicion that he had placed his lighted pipe in that locality. This he found to be just what was the matter, and, jerking it out, threw pipe and all into the street, which put an end to what might have been an extensive coat tail conflagration.

The Presbyterian congregation in this place have abolished the Sunday collection system, and adopted another plan to raise funds for the support of the church. This consists of a card that contains the promissory note of the person holding it to contribute so much a day, and at the end of the month the money so subscribed is to be placed in an envelope and put into the contribution box. This arrangement saves the necessity of sticking a money bag under a person's nose every Sunday, and besides will result in much larger contributions monthly. An average of five cents a day from each member is required for the support of the church in this place, and this average, in this way, will be more than sustained by the members alone, without taking into consideration the large amount that will be contributed by outsiders. This plan, we think, might be beneficially adopted by other congregations.

Further explorations of this remarkable cave will no doubt soon be made, until which time the public curiosity must remain ungratified. DEDICATION—The Lutheran Church of Belleville will be dedicated (God willing) on Sunday, Feb. 13th inst. Rev. M. Officer, missionary to Africa, and other ministers, will assist. The public are respectfully invited.

A SENSATION—THE GREAT CAVE AT "ALEXANDRIA"—Remarkable Discovery.—About half a mile below Belleville, on the left of the railway, is the little town, village or settlement of Alexandria—a name given to it from the fact that it is on the property of Cyrus T. and James Alexander, who are the founders of it, and who are now engaged in the lime business there, having two magnificent kilns and extensive quarries. It was while blasting rock at this place on Monday last, that the entrance to the cave, of which we are about to tell, was discovered. A layer of rock having been blown off a small hole was noticed by the workmen, which on being widened, proved to be the entrance to a cave, the full dimensions of which are unknown, but which, from imperfect explorations that have yet been made of it, we are confident will prove to be one of the most wonderful and interesting natural curiosities of which we have any knowledge. On Tuesday, a small party of curious seekers, consisting of the WATCHMAN and National editors, accompanied by Messrs. W. P. Mitchell, J. W. Devling, C. T. Alexander and others, provided themselves with lanterns and ropes and proceeded to the cave to see what they could see. Arrived at the entrance, Mr. Brainerd and ourself first entered, taking with us the lamps and candles and followed by two of the others with the ropes, the remainder of the party staying at the entrance to render whatever assistance might be necessary. At first it was somewhat difficult to proceed, owing to the fact that the explorers were obliged to crawl upon their hands and knees, in a darkness as black as Egypt. But in a little way, a light was struck, and the party cautiously proceeded, the entrance slightly widening as they advanced. About 25 feet from the entrance, the party came to two holes or inner entrances, one of which was somewhat larger than the other, but neither of which looked large enough to admit any one. Here was a difficulty, but it was overcome by the determination of two of the party, encouraged by the others, to see what was beyond. So tying a rope's end about us, Messrs. Brainerd and ourself, essayed to make the entry, and succeeded, both going through the big hole, but with some difficulty. Once through, we found ourselves in a sort of passage or carriage way—a kind of inclined plane, down which we slowly proceeded a distance of forty or fifty feet. Here we came to two other passage ways, one leading to the right the other to the left. Separating here, with the determination to explore both ways, we unwittingly lost sight of each other. Proceeding a short distance, the writer came to a kind of rude stairway, down which we descended some eight or ten feet, when we emerged into a wonderful room or apartment, the ceiling of which was apparently some forty feet from a floor of beautiful stalagmitic formation, dotted here and there with pools of water, clear as crystal, and in which fish small, but white as the driven snow, disported themselves. From the ceiling and from nooks in the sides hung pendant the most magnificent stalactites, which presented, in the rays of the lamp, almost every color of the rainbow, and was most certainly a beautiful and brilliant sight. On westward, farther than we had time to explore, or the eye could reach, this magnificent cavern extended. At one place the rocks presented the exact appearance of a group of chairs, while at another a very fairly constructed bench was to be observed—there in the rocks were perfect pictures of birds and flowers, insects, miniature cottages, or grand castles—while just a little distance was all the ragged roughness of a crater's mouth. Glittering stones at places strewed the floor, and glass, like formations, strewed the walls. From the main cavern and running almost directly northward were numerous archways, extending on and on, seemingly without end, all of which were beautiful, with stalactites and grotesquely formed rocks. The time allotted us being limited, we were prevented examining any of the apartments fully, and after having gazed in wonder, on the gorgeousness, of the scene, and speculated upon its vastness, until we became somewhat mystified, we ascended the steps carefully, and soon reached the termination of the inclined plane, where we had parted from Brainerd. That gentleman, upon parting from us, continued his way alone, until he, too, emerged into an apartment somewhat similar to the one in which we found ourselves, and described it in glowing terms. He made also the remarkable discovery of two streams of water, not more than ten feet apart, one of which was warm and the other icy cold. This strange phenomenon will do to puzzle the brains of some of our wisest about town.

Further explorations of this remarkable cave will no doubt soon be made, until which time the public curiosity must remain ungratified.

REV. WILKEY, of the Presbyterian Church, of this place, read a letter from his pulpit last Sunday that had been received from a chap in Houston, Texas. This letter was written in view of the fact that the United Presbyterian Church has resolved to send a thousand teachers to the South this year, to labor among the "freedmen," and this fellow asked that among the first points to which the benevolence of the church might be directed, was the town of Houston. There are, he stated, in that town about six thousand niggers, only about 200 of whom are in school. He suggested, therefore, that Houston was about as good a field to begin in, as the church could find anywhere.

So far, all was well enough. But he next suggested that there is great nakedness among these negroes, and intimates that second-hand clothing would come handy. In accordance with this suggestion, the Rev. Wilkey recommended that our garrets should be ransacked for cast away garments, and advocated the formation of a ladies' sewing society, to meet once or twice a week, to make up and patch over these old clothes for the naked little niggers away down in Dixie, so that a box or boxes might be sent to the hands of somebody in New York to the kind and sympathizing hands of this disinterested individual in Houston, Veto Well! This was all well enough, too, only if we were individually to make up a box of charitable contributions for any class of people in the South or anywhere else, we should endeavor to send it direct, by express or otherwise, and not risk its transmission through the hands of any sharper or set of sharpers in New York. Why could it not be sent direct to Houston, instead of having to pass into the care of some grasping, greedy, avaricious dog in New York City? But the explanatory part of the letter is yet to come. The same individual writes that he is an ex-slaveholder—that he opposed secession—that he fought against it in the Federal army—that he was always a Union man, and that he still claims to be a thoroughly "loyal" man. Here we have him—one of those contemptible, canting, hypocritical converts to Radicalism, who turned his hand against and shed the blood of his own people, because he found it was going to pay better to fight against them. And now we find him in the character of an active church member—one of the loud-mouthed kind—praying in the synagogues and on the corners of the streets that he may be seen of men, and soliciting contributions ostensibly to aid a people whom he himself did his best to bring to a state of destitution. It was just such men as him that took those poor negroes from the care of kind masters, who always had and always would have provided for them, and reduced them by false teachings and false promises to their present deplorable state.

We do not wish to be understood as throwing any obstacles in the way of a commendable charity. But we do not trust this chap at Houston. Had he sent to us for assistance, in the name of God and the Christian religion, without boasting of his "loyalty" and the way he fought secession, we might have had some faith in him. But, under the circumstances, we couldn't trust our purse in his possession, and we even hesitate to let him have our old clothes. Moreover, we very much doubt the propriety of reverend gentlemen recommending every person and every plan, of which they happen to have knowledge through a letter, to their congregations, and would beg to suggest that a certain amount of discrimination is necessary in church as well as in other matters.

As far as giving away our old clothes is concerned, we should always remember that charity begins at home. We have plenty of naked little and big niggers in our own town of Belleville, and, for the matter of that, white people, too. Suppose, therefore, that our sewing circles, instead of getting together to work and weep over the miseries of the niggers of Texas, should first undertake to patch the elbows and cover the toes of all our ragged and shoeless little urchins at home, leaving the woolly-pated denizens of the town of Houston and other places to the tender mercies of those who are nearer to them. If, when they have done this, they have any energies to spare, let them be directed into whatever channel through which they may then think God's work can be best accomplished.

A DISTRESSING CASE.—On Wednesday last a very distressing, and at the same time exciting case occurred in the family of Mr. Bond Valentine, of this place, which resulted in the death of his eldest child, a very interesting little boy. It seems that the children had been eating candy during the forenoon, and at dinner had eaten corn starch, shortly after which they were seized with violent vomiting; other symptoms of poison manifested themselves, and the news soon spread that the family had been poisoned. The little boy lingered until noon, yesterday, when he died, and his sister, the only remaining child of Mr. Valentine, is still alive, but cannot possibly survive. The children were about two and four years of age. Drs. Hibler and Fairbank, who were called in yesterday, pronounced the disease malignant scarlet fever, and Dr. Tipple, the family physician, maintains that the children were poisoned. Which of the physicians are right, we suppose will be shown in the case of the little girl.

Radicalism about this place is in tribulation—erape hangs from its door knobs, tears trickle from its eyes, and a moist drop hangs on the point of its nose—one of their voters collapsed the other night—one of the 15th amendments—"Lewis Mills, a gentleman of color," as the Republican calls him, was found dead in his bed one morning of last week—had whisky and the idea of marching arm in arm with Will Brown to the polls next fall was too much for him.

VERY GOOD REASON.—The following letter from Hon. J. G. Meyer, our Representative at Harrisburg, to Mr. Kurtz, of the Centre Hall Reporter, fully explains itself: Harrisburg, January 26th 1870. Hon. J. G. Meyer, I presume a great many of your constituents are anxious to know why it is that I have not yet sent them any public documents. For their information I would simply say that so far we have had no session, and from present appearances it is not likely that we will have many to distribute. The present Legislature seems to be in favor of reform and reformation. The bill before the House yesterday, providing for the printing of the Legislative Record by Mr. Geo. Berger, the man who has had the job for the last few years was defeated by a vote of 16 against 15, from this it appears that Berger's Record is closed. It is likely that nothing more than a Legislative Journal will be published which will dispense with the printing of all the speeches made upon the floor of the House and will certainly be a great saving for the taxpayers of the State. It will take last papers and folders, which will be another item of economy. A statement was made upon the floor of the House, reporting the expenses of the two last years sessions as follows: Cost of Record and expenses contingent and resulting from its publication for the year 1868, $10,000.00. Estimated for the year 1869, $10,000.00. Although the member from our County, Mr. Meek was told did his utmost to prevent such extravagance, yet through the influence of the same in the Record, it was not until the 1st of January, 1870, that you see in not a trifle, we are of the opinion that at least one third can be saved for the people of this State, and no doubt will give better satisfaction than the Record did the way it was published heretofore, as it was not regularly sent to the members of the house and the persons receiving it from the members could not, in that way, keep track of the bills, and consequently it was not of much use to any one. I will here state, however, that all the public documents that I receive, [as will be distributed without delay among my constituents.] J. G. MEYER.

We notice that the tobacco and cigar store in the Bush House, formerly owned by Frank Muller, esq., has been purchased by Mr. Chas. Cook, who will keep constantly on hand a full supply of the "weed."

FOR TWO DAYS ONLY.—The ladies will please notice that Bufo, of Williamsport, has on exhibition at the parlors of Gorman's Hotel, a beautiful assortment of hair ornaments, such as chignon braids, natural hair switches, waverlins, curls, side curls, frizzed wigs topped, and everything in this hair line. For sale cheap.

How Do They Do It?—Many amazing things, and some very unjust things, are said in trying to get the public to buy the "New York" Oak Hair Some say "they lose money by it," but how a house can keep losing money right along, and not fail, or what can be the object of losing money, they do not explain. Others say "they do not half pay their hands," whereas it is notorious that no employees in that line of business are so well paid and so well satisfied, as are those of Wanamaker & Brown, and it must be clear to all, that while the demand for good work is so great as it now is, it would be impossible for W. & B. to command the services of a thousand of the best tailors at inferior prices. And one man was heard to assert very confidently, the other day, that "they must steal them." But whatever may be the explanation, the one thing to be learned by all, is that by universal consent, Wanamaker & Brown do sell cheaper than any other house seems to be able to.
