BELLEFONTE, PA.

The Mistakes of a Night.

An amusing incident is related as occurring in Goldsmith's last journey homeward from Edgeworthstown. His father's house was about twenty miles distant; the road lay through a rough country, impassable for carriages. Goldsmith procured a horse for the journey, and a friend furnished him with a guinea for traveling expenses. He was but a stripling of sixteen, and being thus suddenly mounted on horseback, with money in his pocket, it is no wonder that his head was turned. He determined to play the man and spend his money in independent traveler's style. Accordingly, instead of pushing directly for home, he halted for the night at the little town of Ardagh, and accosting the first person he met, inquired, with somewhat of a consequential air, for the best house in the place. Unluckily, the person he had accosted was one Kelly, a notorious swag, who was quartered in the family of one Mr. Featherstone, a gentleman of fortune. Amused with the self-consequence of the stripling, and willing to play off a practical joke at his expense, he directed him to what was literally "the best house in the place," namely, the family mansion of Mr. Featherstone. Goldsmith accordingly rode up to what he supposed to be an inn, ordered his horse to be taken to the stable, walked into the parlor, seated himself by the fire, and demanded what he could have for supper. On ordinary occasions he was different and even awakened in his manner; but here he was "at ease in his inn," and felt called upon to show his manhood and enact the experienced traveler. His person was by no means calculated to play off his pretensions, for he was short and thick, with a pock-marked face, and an air and carriage of by no means distinguished cast. The owner of the house, however, soon discovered his whimsical mistake, and being a man of humor, determined to indulge it, especially as he accidentally learned that his intruding guest was the son of an old acquaintance.

Accordingly Goldsmith was "fooled to the top of his bent," and permitted to have full sway throughout the evening. Never was school-boy more elated. When supper was served, he most condescendingly insisted that the landlord, his wife, and daughter should partake, and ordered a bottle of wine to crown the repast and benefit the house. His last flourish was on going to bed, when he gave special orders to have a hot cake for breakfast. His confusion and dismay on discovering the next morning, that he had been swaggering in his free and easy way in the house of a private gentleman, may be readily conceived. True to his habit of turning the events of life to literary account, we find this chapter of ludicrous blunders and cross-purposes framed many years afterwards, in his admirable comedy of "She Stoops to Conquer; or the Mistakes of a Night."—From Irving's Life of Goldsmith.

Puritan Morality and Teaching.

The following remarks on divorce are from the Baltimore Sun. These divorce statistics speak volumes in reference to the crime and vice of the "God and morality States," in which there is no dearth of Bibles and Moral tracts:

"The article on President Woolsey, of Yale College, on 'Divorce Legislation in the United States,' to which we referred some time ago, contains startling facts. That article is based on a careful examination of the statistics of twenty-three States, including nearly all the older ones. The causes of divorce are given in the various reports presented to the Legislature. In Vermont, out of 371 divorces in five years there were for adultery 164, willful desertion 138, desertion 60, intolerable severity 136, for refusal to support 13 with twenty others, most of which more cause than one were mentioned. In Massachusetts out of 1,264 divorces granted in about five years, there were for adultery 564, 42.2 per cent.; for desertion 386, or 45.5 per cent.; for cruelty 122 or 9.4 per cent.; for intemperance and 21 miscellaneous. Here the large ratio for adultery is startling. Can this represent the real state of the case? In Ohio out of 3,801 cases of which the causes are particularly assigned, there were granted for adultery 835, for abandonment and neglect 1,040, for cruelty 440, for intemperance 196.

Western Reserve counties have a much larger portion of divorces than the rest of the State. These counties are composed of simple purities of the Puritan stock and the leaders in all manner of things. In Vermont the ratio of annual divorces to annual marriages took up in seven years a total of 730 divorces to 15,710 marriages, or a ratio of 1 to 31. In Massachusetts, for a period of four years, there was a total of 1,022 divorces to 45,372 marriages, a ratio of 1 to 44. In Ohio, in 1866, the divorces were 1,869, the marriages 90,579, a ratio of 1 to 26. In Connecticut, in a period of eight years, the divorces foot up 2,910, marriages 33,327, a ratio of 1 to 11. From Prussia we have some material for instituting a comparison between that country of loose divorce laws and the State above. For instance, in Connecticut, where the whole number of marriages was 4,978 in 1866, the number of marriages in which both parties were of foreign birth were 1,208. Deducing them we have the ratio of 1 divorce to less than 8 1/2 marriages. In Prussia, in 1855, 85,914 marriages and 2,091 divorces; ratio 1 to 25. These statistics go to show that, bad as the vest is in the facilities with it affords for divorce, it has received rather more than its share of odium. There is a general looseness on this subject in the legislation of most of the States, which is discreditable to us as a civilized people and inimical to the happiness and virtue of the country.

The Origin of Greenbacks.

According to Irving, in his "Conquest of Grenada," the invention of greenbacks dates back to 1483, and is attributed to the good Count de Tendilla, commander of the memorable fortress of Alhama. The venerable Fray Antonio Agapida thus relates the circumstances: "It happened" he observes, "that this Catholic cavalier at one time was destitute of gold and silver, wherewith to pay the wages of his troops; and the soldiers murmured greatly, seeing that they had not the means of purchasing the necessaries from the people of the town.

"In this dilemma, what does this most sagacious commander? He takes a number of little morsels of paper, on which he inscribes various sums, large and small according to the nature of the case, and signs me them with his own hand and name. These did he give to the soldiers in earnest of their pay.

"Now," you will say, "are soldiers to be paid with scraps of paper?" Even so, I answer, and well paid, too, as I will presently make manifest; for the good Count issued a proclamation ordering the inhabitant to receive and take those morsels of paper for all amount thereon inscribed, promising to redeem them at a future time with silver and gold, and threatening with severe punishment to all who should refuse. The people, having full confidence in his word, and trusting he would be as willing to perform the one promise as he certainly was able to perform the other, took these curious morsels of paper without hesitation or demur.

"Thus by a subtle and most miraculous kind of alchemy did this Catholic cavalier turn worthless paper into precious gold, and make his late impoverished garrison abundant in money."

It is but just to add that the Count de Tendilla redeemed his promises like a loyal knight, and this miracle, as it appeared in the eyes of Fray Antonio Agapida, is the first instance on record of paper money, which has since inundated the civilized world with unbounded opulence.

The True Story of Cinderella.

The story of Cinderella is familiar to every one, and yet there are few that treasure it up as in any respect true. But it has a foundation and a reality that really need no fairy god mother, with her pumpkin and her rat, to make an entertaining tale. It is as follows:

In about the year 1730 a French actor, by the name of Thevenard, lived in Paris. He was rich and talented, but he had no wife, and we may believe he had never loved any one, but gave all his affections to those ideal characters that he could represent so finely on the stage. One day as he was walking leisurely along the streets of Paris, he came upon a cobbler's stall, and his eye was attracted by a dainty little shoe which lay there waiting for repairs. His imagination began immediately to form the little foot that must fit such a little shoe. He examined it well, but only to admire it more and more.

On going to his house he seemed haunted by the little shoe. He fancied it tripped over his floors; he could here the music of its tread—in fact, there was nothing among all his elegant treasures that seemed to him half so beautiful.

He went to the stall of the cobbler again, but could learn nothing in regard to the owner of the shoe. This only increased his eagerness, and made him more determined to know to whom it belonged. Day by day he was disappointed, but he was not discouraged.

At last the little foot needed the little shoe, and Thevenard met the owner, a poor girl whose parents belonged to the humble class. But the ardent actor thought not of caste or family. His heart had already pronounced the girl one his wife. He married the girl, with no question of what people would say, and felt joy enough in hearing the tread of the light, dainty feet through the silent rooms, to pay him for the sacrifice of people's approval. This is the true story of Cinderella, and from which the child romance sprang.
