Eugenie's Escape From Paris,

From over the sea, and from one who knows, comes to the Old Cabingt, says Scribner's Monthly, thus friendly heiter, tolling "the true story" of the theit of the Empress Eugenie. What B moskery sounds the title now !-yet somehow we think the royal lady counts more anbigets to day than ever in all her life before :

"You have read that the Empresmade her esonpe assisted by M de Les Beps, of Suez fame. Substitute for this gentleman our friend Dr. Evans, and you have the beginning of the truth. I must give you the facts of this remarkable fight. The proclamation of the Republic followed closely upon the sur The proclamation of the render upon the Emperor at Sedan The Empress, who had borne up against every misfortune with perfect heroism, was at the Tailleries. Prince Metter nich and Count Nigra were in attend ance, and Gee. Trochy had humself given herassurance of his personal pro tection, saying, "No one shall touch you till they have passed over my dead body " When, however, the mob came surging into the Tuilleries, the Enton (who is a sister of Gen. Bourbacki), left the palace by a side door. As they were entering a stailare de ploy, a gemin who stood near cried out, 'Viola i Emperatrice!' Madame le Breton and followed by the nob. "Arrived at a secluded street, and tearing that the driver of the cab knew them, they left the rollare, paid the cab man his fare, and after walking on for some time, took another, and drove directly to the house of Dr. Evans, in the Avenue PImperatrice. While they The cockroach iz a big at large. They are born four trom each eye, and consequently they were not suspected.

"The Doctor was not at home, and Mrs. Evans had been for some time at Beauville-the well-known watering place near Harve. The two strangers the Empress deeply vailed - 'wished to see the Doctor, and would await his return.' They were shown into the li-brary. At the usual hour the Doctor returned, and was informed of the presence of his two visitors. He en-tered his library and found, to his amazement, the Empress. Excusing himself to a company of gentlemen in vited to dinner, on the ground of hav ing received sudden and important news, he at once, with that fertility of invention which is so characteristic of him, began to arrange a plan with the Empress for her wecape from France the Doctor's carriage was at her dis pression. It was, however, imprudent to pressive press at hight, as it might a take -a-pression, and so her Majesty passed the first night beneath his roof At tour in the morning the party start ed tor St. Germain. They passed the gates unchallenged. The Empress was tobe known as Mis. Stewart, a 'cery great invalid,' whose health was so del wate that she could not travel by train. and who actually was sometimes oblig ed to be lifted from the carriage. Ma dame le Breton was her sister, and the doctor and the person with him were medical attendants. Nothing could have succeeded better. As they wore fearful that telegrams might have been sent to the railway stations, and larger towns, they avoided both as far as possible, keeping to the villages.

"Frequent relays of horses were had as they continued their journey to the sea. They traveled the first day until midnight when they stopped at a small mn. There was but one spare room, with two beds in it. 'Why, we are all brothers and sisters,' suid the Empress, 'and we must have two rooms. Λt By noon length this was arranged. the next day the party reached Denu ville. Mrs. Evans was first advised of her august visitor, and in a few moments the Empress entered the apartment. Wearied and exhausted with a chair, exclaiming, 'Merci Dieu, sanyet? (Thank (iod, saved?) "That afternoon the yacht of Sir John Burgoyne was secured to convey that the party should go on board at undnight. By marvelous good fortune her crossing the Casino ground and entry to the hotel had not been observed, so no one in the house suspected her presence there. After a refreshing sleep she was taken to the yacht, which sailed early the next morning for England Here a new danger arsailed them, they were twenty hours in a violent storm, all believing that the end had now come, as the yacht was not fit for such work. Her calmness never for-ook her. At last they reached the English shore. The Empress then beauned for the first time that her son was in England, and the reunion of mother and child took place. After a w days' sojourn at Hastings a suitable villa was found at Chiselburst, where she now lives. "There were several accidents during the flight, which will, I think, interest you The ladies will be glud to know that she was dressed in a plain black rilk, black merino polonaise, and jaunty black telt hat, with a graceful little plume on one side. Of course it would not be possible for the Empress to dress ( man to do is to fall down on the ice unbecomingly under any circumstancee. During all this anxiety and fa tigue her presence of mind never for sook her, and during all her nobleness of character was most apparent. Safe at Deauville, her mind was released from its constant tension of anxiety, and she recounted the amusing inci deals of the journey with the greatest good humor, laughing most heartily at her successful impersonation of the English invalid, her extreme weakness | colored persuasion to looked up.

Her departure had been so sudden that she had taken nothing with her, and Mrs. Evans supplied her wants from her own wardrobe. As she was about to recline upon the bed which Mrs. Evans had arranged for her, she stopped to admire the pillow which her friend had . provided, and remarked, "How pretty it is --it's too mice." In all these hille neidents she manifested the most perfeet simplicity and sweetness of char-acter, embracing Mrs. Evans most heartily on taking leave of her.

The Donaldsonville Affair. The following account is from the Picayane of the 10th :

"From what we can learn, it appears bouse in Domatison vitre to the anarch-and plantation, in St. James parish. The citizens objected to this, as contra-ry to haw. Matters remained quiet un-til Toesday morning, when a squad of armed negro militia appeared on the opposite bank of the river and threatened to burn the town unless the ballot-boxes were delivered to them. The citizons refused to comply with this de-mand. The militia then attempted to mind The militin then attempted to cross the river. Only one skiff with live men, however, haded at the Don-atdsonville wharf. Upon handing, the five armed negroes were ordered by the cutzens' to surrender. With the ex-ception of one, they all hand down their arms. The fifth negro, more stubborn than the rest and still refusing to disarm, was fixed on and shift refusing to finance. was fired on and shot through the right leg. The negroes then returned, and matters remained quiet for awhilo It was the quietness before a storm The negro militus, enraged at the re-fusal they had met, crossed 140 men strong, at a point lower down and marched to the outskirts of the town On the way they were joined by large bodies of negroes from other plantations The threat to take and burn the town wa not only repeated, but the mob demanand that three cutzens as hostages, and ballot boxes, and the prisoners in the juil, be delivered to them - Judge W pull, be delivered to mean a song, s, C. Lawless, the former Mayor of Don-ald-sonville, and Max. Schaumburg re-construction and Maxor by Gov. Warcently appointed Mayor by Gov - War-moth, went in a buggy to the outskirts with the intention of arranging matters annicably. For greater safety, they went under a flag of truce. So enraged were, however, the negroes, that the two men were dragged from their buggy and shot dead on the spot At 11 o clock yesterday morning the negroes were marching into the town. The greatest consternation prevailed, and men, women and children fled for their lives. We hear that United States troops left this city yesterday to quell the disturbance " This is but one of the legitimate fruits of Radicalism The very negroes are taught to believe that said party is a party of force, and that they have a legitimate right to plunder, mob mor-der and steal, and commit any and every violence they think proper.

These flendish negroes will, if not restrained, soon become a greater terror to the whites than ever were the ruthless savages of the American forest , and, like the Indians, will have to be exterminated, or driven info the ocean, before white people can have a permanent peace, or any security for life or property
