And MIT, FUERN loss from the faule in a temper by no means amiable, and rang the bell violently. There was no answer. Out of all patience he went to the door and called : 'Maria ! Maria !'

A slight, pretty little woman,dressed in a soiled, tumbled wrapper, with hair in a state of direful confusion, answered his summons. She had one of those faces which nature intended should be decked with continued smiles; but now all its roses in bloom, it was drawn to its fullest longth, and the large eyes had a serious, or rather doleful exprassion, totally at variance with its usual joyous look. Her voice, too, had lost its melodious ringing sound, and was subdued to a dismal whine.

Joe made no answer, unless the vio lenty emphatic manner in which he closed the door was one. Muttering with anger, he strode to a restaurant to make a breakfast. Here he was hailed by one of his old friends, Fred Somers, who looked up as he heard loes order.

'A sure ?'

'Yes, if you will promise to take my advice, I will make your home cheer ful, your wife pleasant, and your children happy.'

'Doit,' cried Joe, I'll follow your advice like a soldier under his superior officer. What shall 1 do.'

At tes time Mr. Peters entered his home, whistling. Maria was seated at her sewing, and there were no signs of the preparation for the evening meal. "Maria, my dear," said Mr. Peters, "is tea ready ?"

"I don't know," was the answer; "I have been out all day attending Yes, my dear, of course, Well, I must resign myself, I suppose. By the way, my dear, has it never occurred to u that I shall be left a widower with three children? I think I am a handsome man yet, my love." And Joe walked over to the glass, passed his fingers through his hair, and pulled up his collar. Maria looked up in surprise,

"You see, my dear, its rather a reief for you to go quickly, you know--it is so wearing on the nerves to have illness; and besides, my dear, there will be no funeral expenses to pay, and that is quite a saving." Mrs. Peters' lip quivered, and her large blue eyes filled with tears.

Joe longed to quit his heartless speech and comfort her, but he was fearful the desired effect was not gain-

"So, my dear," he continued, "if you must go, I have been thinking of getting another wife." "What ?" cried Mrs. Peters.

'Another wife, my love. The house must be kept in order, and the boys cared for. The grief was gone from Maria's face, but her teeth were set with a look of fierce wrath. - Marcy tound himself the center of a small but increasing party. Dr. Adams saw this, and deemed it his duty to interfere. Accordingly he summoned the young man before him for the pur pose of expostulating with him upon the course he was pursuing, in advancing his dangerous political sentiments. To his surprise he found the young Democrat as firm and unflinching in his presence as he was in the debate. It was in vain that the good doctor reasoned, threatened and cajoled. He was met with arguments which puz zled him to answer, and which were firmly but modestly maintained. At length Mr. Adams saw that matters must be brought to a decided point.

'Am I to understand, then, said he, 'that your's determined to openly advocate the cause and principles of that infidel, Jefferson, here in this institu, tion? 'It I hear him or his principles open ly attacked, I shall certainly defend him, II, however, you will forbid all allusion to politica here, I will most cheerfully subscribe to the rules,' said

Marcy. 'It is my duty, sir, to expose error and wickedness in all ways, and in every manner, and to teach my pupils to do the same, and therefore cannot establish such a rule,' said the doc tor. . Then, sir, if you allow one class of students to discuss politics, you should give others the same privilege,' said the young man.

'No, sir; not when one side proposes to advocate infidelity and all manner of evil,' said the doctor. "Who is to be the judge as to what MONONGAHELA AND political principles are erronencous?

asked Marcy. 'I am, sir; and to be plain, you must abandon all public utterence of your sentiments here.' "And if I do not obey this order

what is to be the consequence ?' 'You will be expelled from the in-stitution, sir,' said the doctor with
