

BELLEFONTE, PA.

An Adventure.

Donn Piatt tells the following good story in one of his letters:

The latest story that is going the rounds here is told of one of the second joints, as the secretaries were called, to distinguish them from the High Joints. This was an elegant youth, rather slender and tall, whose talk began and ended in one short sentence, which said 'Aw, I beg y'r pawdon,' which drew out, has a very pleasing result, and is being generally imitated by our free born youths of America about Washington.

It seems that this sprig of English nobility was invited to pass some days at the country house of a wealthy American, and late at night before retiring, concluded to take 'a bath, you know,' and so directed by a servant, he found his way to the bath room and turning on the warm water, was soon enjoying a full length and delicious souce of an entire relaxation of his aristocratic person and repose of his aristocratic intellect.

Unfortunately the daughter of the house also concluded to take a dip in the tub, and not knowing what their illustrious guest had done to himself, undressed in her room, ran hurriedly along the hall for fear of meeting some one, and dashing hurriedly into the bath room, closed the door. What was her consternation to see a head raise languidly from the tub, and a voice exclaim:

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

She screamed a scream—I indulge in no exaggeration when I say that that girl screamed a scream of the first magnitude, and then she screamed another scream as, in her confusion, she turned the key in the wrong direction, and so did not open the door. Between each scream the languid voice exclaimed:

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

After sixteen screams, any one of which would have rivaled the locomotive's, she succeeded in opening the door, and fell fainting into the arms of her frightened papa. So soon as pater familias could relieve himself of his nude daughter, he stuck his paternal head into the bath room and wanted to know what the h—l was the matter. All he could get in reply, was:

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

'Aw, I beg pawdon.'

Mother Speak Low.

I know some houses, well built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, angry tones resound through them from morning to night, and the influence is contagious as measles, and as much to be dreaded in the household. The children catch it, and it lasts for life, an incurable disease. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house when doors and windows are open, and even Doll Parrot caught the tune, and delights in screaming until she has been sent into the country to improve her habits. Children catch cross tones much quicker than parrots, and it is a much more mischievous habit. When the mother sets the example you will scarcely hear a pleasant word among the children among their plays with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is always weak and irregular. The children expect just so much scolding before they do any thing they are bid, while in many a home, where the low, firm tone of the mother or the decided look in her steady eyes is law, they never think of disobedience, either in or out of her sight. O mother, it is worth a great deal to cultivate that "excellent thing in woman," a low, sweet voice. If you are ever so much tired by the mischievous or willful pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you to even try to be patient and cheerful if you cannot succeed. Anger makes you wretched, and your children also. Impatient, angry tones never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. Read what Solomon says to them, and remember he wrote with an inspired pen. For your own, as well as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember the lesson when your head is under the willows. "No, too, will they remember a harsh, angry tone. What legacy will you leave to your children?"

Wanted--A Man.

A Forsaken Female Tells Her Sad Tale Through the Medium of an Advertisement--A Literary Gem.

The subjoined novel contribution to the literature of the language first appeared in the advertising columns of a Pennsylvania paper:

$100 Reward.--For the apprehension of Zenus Tuttle, a tall man of about 60 years, has considerable money and a high forehead long face and lantern-jawed man a bad man with a fat like a giant, and has often beat me and I want him to end his days in a penitentiary where he belongs, and he wears a gray coat with a very large mouth, and one blind eye, and a hideous-looking man, and now living with the seventh woman and having one child to him, and he has gone off and I want him brought slap up in the law with blue pants on.

He ought to be arrested, and has a hundred dollars of my money, and a bald-headed rascal, full of flattery and deceit, and her little girl calls 'papa,' and is called Eliza Jane Pills, and a boy blind of one eye and he is not a man what has got any too much sense, nor her.

And he stole one hundred dollars from me and some of my gold and silver, and ought to be caught, and I will never live with him again, no, never, he is a disgrace, and I would like to have him caught up and compelled to maintain me and his child, as I am his lawful wedded wife, and have the certificate of marriage in my possession.

NANCY TUTTLE. Finleyville, Penn., 1871.

A man some sixty miles below New Orleans was accosted by a stranger.

'Sir, have you any money about you?'

'Yes,' was the reply, 'I always make it a point to carry some money with me, more or less.'

'Well,' rejoined the stranger, 'I wish to cross the river; the fare is ten cents. Would you please to accommodate me with that sum?'

The man put on a look of well affected surprise, and exclaimed--

'Sir, do you mean to say that you haven't ten cents?'

'Yes, sir, I have ten cents,' rejoined the stranger.

'Well, respect me, gentleman, if you haven't a cent it'll make little difference on which side of the river you are,' and coolly left the stranger to his own reflections.

HE COLON'S UNDERSTANDING. -- 'Are you an old fellow?'

'No, sir, I've been married a week.'

'I mean do you belong to the order of Odd Fellows?'

'No! I belong to the order of married men.'

'Thunder! how dumb! are you a Mason?'

'No! I am a shoemaker by trade.'

'Worse and worse! Are you a Son of Temperance?'

'Confound you, no. I am the son of Mr. John Gosling.'

A Yankee editor lately killed a lady in his paper. The bereaved husband visited him.

'Villain!' cried the enraged husband, 'you have killed my wife!'

Editor (with dignity)--'Sir, I am an editor, not a doctor!'

'That's just it,' cried the bereaved husband; 'you've killed her on paper, and she's alive.'

'If she's not dead, I congratulate you.'

'Congratulations! I demand damages for disappointment.'

An ambitious Vermonter thinks that the voters of Rutland are the most uncertain people extant. He ran on the rum ticket at the town meeting, and on the temperance ticket at the village election, but somehow or other got beaten both times.

Honesty the Best Policy.

The very learned murderer who was executed in New York, and for whom Governor Hoffman would listen to no plea for mercy, was an example of the worthlessness of more intelligence, without moral culture. If it be necessary to hang an ignorant, brutal murderer, there was less reason to execute the more cultivated and more dangerous villain. The public has been favored with his opinions, from which the less harm may come, as they are coupled with the result of them. He was a man who lived without any sense of moral responsibility to God; no sense of honor or principle, his only restraint from crime was the penalty of the law, and that he expiated to baffles. It is on this chance that scoundrels without conscience, the "unconditional scoundrels," count. They hope to have political friends on the Grand Jury; they look to some political associate on the Bench, and they rob and murder, with this chance of impunity. But the very smart villains, who for awhile baffle human justice, are often overtaken by it, and though they scoff at the idea, there is a divine justice that they never escape. Let the community beware of such men in the day of their arrogance and ambition. Their elevation corrupts public morals, shakes public security, and saps the trust of the young and the unthinking, in honesty and virtue. The evil career that ends on the gallows is not so bad in its influence as the career of unburied scoundrels who claim public honors, and sometimes, by fraud, get them. We heartily join in the general call of the Democratic Press throughout the State, for the utmost discrimination in the choice of candidates upon the score of character. Let us have men of clear records, and recognized integrity, men whose lives show that they realize the profound truth of the great maxim, "Honesty is the best policy." That is the true Democratic policy. --Age

Much curiosity is being felt as to the contents of a certain casket which was presented by the late Duke of Wellington to his godson, Prince Arthur, when he was twelve years old, with strict injunctions that it should not be opened until his twenty-first birthday. The casket was closely sealed, and has ever since remained inviolate in the custody of the Queen's bankers. Prince Arthur will attain his majority on the approaching first of May, when, it is understood, the seal will be broken. Somebody is probably in the secret, but if so, it has never been divulged. As a matter of course, in this betting country, bets are high as to the nature of its contents, and it is a fair and interesting subject of curiosity and speculation. I suspect that when the mysterious casket is opened, it will be found to contain the information that Prince Arthur will find subject to his order at some banking house a considerable sum of money, which has been accumulating during the last twenty years. But this is only a guess, and one guess is as good as another. You will doubt less shortly after this letter reaches you. --Correspondence of Chicago Journal.

BRICK AND BUTLER--The Radical papers have treated their readers to a letter of Butler, in which he said that the wife of "Brick" Pomeroy engaged him as her counsel to procure a divorce, and that Butler forced Pomeroy to allow his wife 20,000, and an annuity. Mr. Pomeroy has nailed the labelhood in a letter to the New York Tribune, in which he states that Mr. Pomeroy and himself separated by mutual consent in 1861, and that a divorce was recently agreed upon in an amicable manner; that Mrs. Pomeroy is an estimable lady, and never wrote to Butler or asked for his assistance in any way; that Butler wrote to her and offered his services, but that no notice was taken of his letter by Mrs. Pomeroy, and no reply was made; that Mrs. Pomeroy was never in need of pecuniary assistance; and that Butler's letter is false in every particular--which is no more than might have been expected by any sensible person. The Tribune published Mr. Pomeroy's letter, but it remains to be seen whether other Radical journals will have the manhood to make the same apology for their misstatements.

THE STATE PROGRAMME. -- At the late temperance convention in Philadelphia, the following programme of organization was agreed upon:

Resolved, That the Chair at once appoint a State Central Committee which shall hold its first meeting, at the call of its chairman, within thirty days of its appointment, when they shall prepare and publish rules for conducting elections of Senatorial and Representative delegates to a State Convention, expressly defining all the powers of officers to conduct said delegate elections; adopt rules for the government of county executive committees, and facilitate organization by the appointment of a chairman for each county, who shall, in turn appoint colleagues to act in behalf of every election precinct. When organization is complete in a majority of the counties, the chairman of the State Central Committee shall call a State convention to revise, reconstruct, modify or adopt, and endorse the preliminary steps then taken and take such other steps as may be deemed advisable.
