The Evans Steal—A Thief on His gus.

Mr. George O. Evans, the happy possessor of nearly three hundred thousand dollars of public money, which, but for his surpassing cunning and the felonious help of Geary, would and the reionious help of Geary, would be lodged at this moment in the Treasry, is not only still at large but very much at large. He expatiates over the breadth of whole commonwealths. To day he cools his entrails with the sparkling waters of Saratoga. Tomorrow, we find him laving his limbs in the waves of the Atlantic, side by aide with illustrious Grant, on the sands of Long Branch. Indeed, Grant is said to have been charmed with George at first sight. They are persons of kindred tastes. Grant likes money—so does George. George is not particular how he gets it-neither is ticant. George has a great many relations (his father married the widow Jones whose maiden name was Smith) and provides for them Mandsomely at the public expense. Grant, we need hardly say, is not without blood relations, and has tenderness for all of them on which the tax payes can hard ly reflect without tears of emotion. In short, if it had pleased Heaven to inspire George with military ardor during the late retellion (which was an happily not the case) and he had chanced to be kicked up the ladder of promotion till he struck a Major Generalship, there is no reason in the world why he should not be a tormidable candidate for the Republican nomination to the Presidency, against Grant. Does anybody suppose that the Black Republicans want honest men in high places? Does a party that lives by corruption, and hopes to perpetuate its rule by the use of stolen money, want virtuous public servants at Washington? Do burglars gracounty provide banks with bull dogs, keen of tooth and sharp of hearing, that they may heighten the excitement of their midnight work by increasing its peril? No. They select for their operations a vault guarded by a sleepy and infirm old watchman-the older and eleepier the better- and they gorge his dog (if he chances to keep ne) with meat enough to silence his bark and set the demoralized brute snoring. And it is just such guardianship of public treasure as this which mports best with the schemes of the Radicals. They want somebody in the White House who won't see stealing though it be done under his very nose. If he will help to steal, so much the better-and, it Evan; had only a military fame, his claims to the contractors would be very formed

Aiready he has power enough—be ing, as yet, a mere private citizen-to-it the laws of this Commonwealth at detrance. Genry, in whose pockets a big pile of the precious swag is jugling, trembles at his nod. Brewster, the Attorney tienersi; is acting, in all par ticulars, as his private counsel. The honest young man McClure who exposed the enormous fraud was reward

At last when it was concluded among the shareholders in the three hundred thousand that Evans had bet retire for a little season until the storm would have time to blow over, he was quietly advised to make a trip to Can ada where he has a (or might have, i) his grandmother had been more prohiic) a manden aunt whom he yearned to behold in the flesh. As soon as he was sately out of eight Genry was seized with a sudden zeal for public interests and avowed a stern determination to seize the criminal and have him punished to the extent of the law. To this end he issued a requisition on Governor Hoffman for the surrender of Evalua (who was reported to be in Al bany) and entrusted it to one Officer Hoopes, a policeman of rare talent for being around the corner and out of right when roughs are pounding respeciable citizens, but a mighty to boot-blacks, apple women and male-factors of six years old an I downwards. Hoopes delivered his papers to Governor Hoffman one morning about time o'clock. The Governor at once took them in hand, examined them, heard an argument in the case, and, at four in the atternoon, issued the proper order for the surrender of Evans. But Hoopes couldn't find him. Queer! wasn't it? considering that Geary had carefully notified Evans of the whole proceeding in advance and left to the taste of that nimble rogue the selection of a route to Canada! It will builds be credited, in view of these facts, that the Harrisburg Telegraph signalized the return of Hoopes from his vain errand with an article beaded Ecaus escapes by Hoffman's aid! One Thief helps another off ! Can effrontery tarther go than this? And is ere any hope for the future of a people who will, by their votes, elevate to guard, and Hawley says, that Butler the highest stations of trust scoundrels is a thief and a fiar. Both of the mits of the State prison only in the magnitude of their stealings? Republies are not overturned like thrones by the sudden uphravel of a revolution. They rest upon the virtue of the multitude and fotter as that decays. And, if the duration of ours is to be measured by the character of the rule, rulhas already fastened upon its cornerstone, and its days of glory will not be long among the nation.—Easton Argus.

THE WIVES OF GREAT MEN. In one of the towns of Michigan resides a legal gentleman of fine abilities, an eloquent talker, a thorough lawyer, and a good follow generally; but he tippleth too frequently. And this habit has retarded his advancement. His party frequently promised him a position, but the poor man's failing had as frequently rendered it inexpedient just at the time. Finally the congressional nemination was within his grasp. He had a wife. She, too, wished to go to Washington. Other representatives took their spouses to the capital. She mentioned the Inct to Robert expect to go dear, don't you?'

"And do as other Congressmen do?

"Yes," gruffly
"Well as other men take their wives, you'll take me."

"I don't care, you can go "But dear, you know I've never been there, nor never been out much. How do you think I'll appear among other great men's wives?"

A Foolish Young Wife.

She Elopes the Day after Her Mar-riage, with a Young New York Ras-cal—He Robs Her of $1,000 and Leaves Her to Her Fate.

Soon after the arrival of the cleven clock Hannibal and St. Joseph train, o'clock Hannibal and St. Joseph train, Monday night, the railroad "bus" deposited at one of our principal hotels a young and beautiful girl, about nineteen years of age. She had no baggage, and was apparently in great distress. It was with a trembling and a choked voice that the gave her name to the night-unit and baggad the share at the share to a night-clark and desired to be shown to a room. In the marning the landlady of the hotel waited apon her, and with difficulty, elected the following history of her troubles —Her name she gave as Etha Adams. She had left her parents home, near Lama, Sanda-ky countries. ty, Ohio, one week ago, the restless, dis-satisfied bride of a young momer, who had been given to har as her husband. They had been sensol mates together in childhood, but of late years they had been separated, she attending school at Oberlin he working on his lather's form. Oberlin, he working on his father's farm. The marriage was not objectionable to her neither was it her choice. The young compin were married and took the train at Norwalk for Chavoland, where they took passage via the lakes ter Chicago, intending as she states, to visit some friends of her husband's near Eigin,

The steamer was crowded with a gay and festive cosmopolitan crowd, including preachers, gamblers, farmers, traders, tourists and "school-marms." The evenings were long and pleasant and the company sociable. In the party on hoard were a party from Butlale, among whom was a good-looking, well-dressed youth, ot more than twenty-two years of age, to whom the young wife was introduced. "George D Rankin and Mrs Adams" soon because very friend ly, and to pass the evenings away Mrs. Adams who had been nurtured in the lap of tree-levels in, proposed a game of office hete; The mysterious board was produced, and as she says, on worked to a charm? They played with the trinket every evening upon the cabin-table, and from it she learned that Wr. Rinkin was her true husband. and nothing should intervene to keep them separate. Through the mischie-ous "Planchette" Rankin planned an elopement at Milwaukee, and a flight to Colorado. The stolid young farmer, to Colorado busy with the fast youths on the fore-castle and deck, noticed nothing unusuand obtained from him his well-filled pocket-book. The New Yorker and Mrs Adams took a short walk while the steamer touched at Milwaukee and of course torgot to return. A tast night train car ied them to Chicago, and then on to Quincy, where they tarried This is the third latal accident that has very recently occurred in this vicinity, which had been previously presented to victims in dreams a short to meanly $1,000, and exchanged a ed possession of her money, amounting to nearly $1,000, and exchanged a worthfess gift ring for a valuable dia-mond one—a gift from her mother reached Cameron, when her "affinity," Rankin, left her, as he said, "for a few mintes, to take a smoke in a forward car.
