The Shark's Habits.

The Fish Is a Great Coward in the Pres ence of Living Men.

The author of "On The Blue Water," a man who has sailed much on the tropical seas and had many opportunities for studying the nature and habits of fish, treats the common belief that the shark is a man eater as a superstition. Man does not have his dwelling in the water, and it is only rarely that, as their warmth melts and injures the by accident or design, he exposes him self to the attacks of the shark. It is not likely therefore, that he was intended to be the natural and preferred food of the fish. The writer referred to above says that he had never conversed with any one who had seen a living man attacked by a shark. He gives an amusing account of a meeting between a black sailor and a shark, which makes it appear that this fish is a great coward in the presence of man.

His ship, an English one, was lying our scientific men agree that oleo is in Bombay harbor. Boyer's Cowardice.

It is stated that Henry K. Boyer, the Republican nominee for State Treasurer, is such a political coward that he refused to go to the polls on the 18th of June last when the prohibition election was on hand. This shows that he was afraid to vote one way or the other. Is such a man fit to be trusted? Mr. Bigler didn't stay away from the polls on that occasion, but deposited his ballot like a man.
