BELLEFONTE, PA. Having assumed the proprietorship of this finely located and well known hotel, I desire to inform the public that while it will have no bar, and be run strictly as a temperance hotel, it will furnish to its patrons all the comforts, conveniences and hospitalities offered by others. Its table will be surpassed by any. Its rooms are large and comfortable. Its stabling is the best in town, and its prices to transient guests and regular boarders will be very reasonable. The citizens of the town will find in the basement of my hotel a FIRST-CLASS MEAT MARKET at which all kinds of Meat can be purchased at the very lowest rates. I earnestly solicit a share of the public patronage. 33 13 GOTTLIEB HAAG.

An Distinguished Convert.

President Elliot Tells Why He Left the Republican Party.

Below we give the greater part of the address of President Elliot, of Harvard College, at a dinner given by the Bay State Club, in Boston, to the nominees of the Democratic party in Massachusetts for the State officers. After stating that the Presidents of both nominating conventions, the writers of both party platforms and both candidates for Governor were Harvard graduates, he said:

"I am independent in politics, and I believe that you, as practical politicians, desire to know, is how to convert a few thousand voters from the Republican to the Democratic party, and that is just what has been effected in my own case. I say I am independent in politics in a sense. In the first place, there may be 2,000,000 Americans who have, or expect to have, public employment, but there are 58,000,000 who know that if they wanted public employment they could not get it. I belong to these 58,000,000 [Laughter and applause.]

"I am an independent in another respect. I will remain in a party no longer than it stands for the principles I believe in. [Applause.] Now, the Republican party has a great past. It was formed for the carrying out of a great moral idea, and it did carry it forward to triumph. But it fell from its high estate, and when I found that it no longer stood for the principles I believed in I felt myself obliged to join the opposite party. [Applause.] I believe that we should all choose between the two great parties of the country, and that the position of a man who hangs between the two, now with one and now another, is politically without convictions. But I think my experience may be a help to you in converting a few thousand Republicans to the Democratic party.

"Let me tell you what public questions I had in my mind when I joined the Democratic party. They are all national issues. In the first place, as regards taxes, the Republican policy, that a Republican and almost a protectionist I came to believe that the protective policy was a false one. I came to believe that the protective duties, so called, protected capital, but not labor [applause], and that even this protection to capital was undesirable in the long run, as regards taxes, and the Democratic party, the issues are sharply divided, and any man who holds to my opinions on these issues must join the Democratic party. [Cries of "Good, good," and applause.] I believe that the reform of the civil service is of vital interest to this country, and that no Government can afford to be the public shame of a corruption and derived from the salaries of the servants of the Government. [Applause.] Now, on that issue, what is the record of the Republican party, as compared with the record of the Democratic party? Have we not seen the public service degenerating more and more, and in these last series of years worse than all? Have we not seen the Democratic administration of public service the best we have ever had? [Long-continued applause.]

"No intelligent man will believe in relying upon the professions of a party when its public acts betray them. We must rely upon the public acts of men in the party. It is the no difference between the administration of Grover Cleveland and of Benjamin Harrison on that issue? [Applause.]

"And I have another reason to give, which is peculiar to myself. I have not heard it spoken of by any public man, nor have I seen it mentioned in the newspapers. I am a firm believer in the justice and expediency of a pension system. I believe in pensioning, not only the soldiers and the sailors who have served their country in the army and the navy, but in pensioning all public servants who deserve well of their country, and I hold it to be a hideous wrong inflicted upon the public, that the pension system, instituted for the soldiers and sailors who served their country on the field of battle, has been prostituted to the worst purposes. [Great applause.] You cannot tell now whether a pensioner was a brave man or a cowardly deserter. You cannot tell whether he received an honorable wound or contracted catarrh twenty years after the war was ended. [Laughter and applause.] You cannot tell whether he is a pauper who has foisted himself upon the nation.

"It is a crime against the country, and it is a Republican administration that has brought it to this condition. [Applause.] What administration has striven to stem this tide of pauperism that has tended to degrade the service of the citizen? Grover Cleveland's. [Tremendous applause.]

"I would do every thing in my power to get a chance to again vote for Grover Cleveland for President of the United States, because he did what he could to restore the pension system to an honorable standing. [Applause.] But these are national issues, and we are asked what they have to do with the State campaign. I think it a very foolish question. It gave an excellent opportunity for such debates as our candidate conducted a year ago, and which he is about to conduct again in the interests of the Commonwealth. [Great applause.]

"I have one thing to regret as President of Harvard College at the opening of this campaign. It is that a graduate of Harvard College should have declined a public encounter, and I was somewhat astonished at the reason given for this refusal. It was stated this custom of holding joint debates was a Southern practice, and that on this account it must seem to the people of Massachusetts undesirable. It was a practice in the Southern States, it is true, and it was a many practice. [Applause.] But I should think the Republican managers might remember the greatest debate that ever occurred in this country—the debate between Lincoln and Douglas—and I could have wished that the representatives of the Republicans could have considered the example of Abraham Lincoln good enough for them.

Terrible Experiences of a Kentuckian With a Huge Reptile.

There is a familiar story about how Daniel Webster, when he was practicing law in New Hampshire, loftily denounced a quotation from a text book made by a rival attorney as absurd and untenable, upon which the opposing lawyer quietly explained that the passage so contemptuously treated had been introduced into the volume from one of Lord Mansfield's decisions, that great jurist exact language being preserved. The following anecdote, about a famous old character in Whitley county, Ky., has much the same flavor. Joshua Barnett was a wag and a religious orator, and possessed a prodigious memory. The Jelico News tells the story:

"Uncle Josh, as he was generally called, had an appointment to preach one Sunday at an out-of-the-way log school house in his neighborhood, and two noted lights of a rival denomination attended the meeting for the purpose of criticizing the sermon. One was named Jones, the other Warman. Uncle Josh, who, it appears, was aware of their intentions, concluded to checkmate them, and instead of preaching a sermon he commenced repeating from memory, and without any comment whatever, one of the Epistles of St. Paul. For nearly an hour chapter after chapter fell from his lips accompanied by grave and devious gesture and intonation. Brother Jones at the end of some thirty minutes arose with grave disapproval written all over his face and retired from the house, and took a seat in the yard upon a barkless and prostrate tree, which was used as a horse block. Brother Warman stood it some ten minutes longer, when he too arose and joined Brother Jones. 'Well, Brother Warman, what do you think of such a sermon?' said Brother Jones. 'Think?' said Brother Warman, 'why, I think if the good Lord will forgive me this time for listening to such rotten doctrine, I will never be guilty again.'

"In those improvements which make railroad travel a luxury the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has always been a pioneer. The handsome finish and comfort of its ordinary cars almost rival the old drawing-rooms, can support with rockers and other easy chairs, has been placed in the rear of the sleepers, in which persons taking berth can ride while their beds are being prepared. Barber-shops are provided for men, and arrangements have been made to receive stock quotations on the day trains. So a traveler can now have as many conveniences and luxuries on a Pennsylvania train as he can obtain in his own home or hotel.

"LIMA, O.—Several weeks ago the neighboring town of Lafayette passed a prohibition ordinance, and all of the saloons were closed. A few days ago a saloon-keeper of this city went to Lafayette and opened a place. He was waited upon by a committee who informed him that his business was not required there, but he continued and the town officials got out an injunction to stop him. The judge decided in his favor and he resumed business with more openness than ever. Early yesterday morning his saloon was bombarded by a crowd of several hundred persons. They came armed with stones and sledgehammers, and, surrounding the place, commenced to storm it. The doors and windows were broken and the crowd rushed in. The bar was battered down, mirrors broken, the heads of barrels knocked in, and the contents wasted. The place was almost torn down and every thing ruined.

"Not Bulk, but Business!" is the way a Western man put it in expressing to a friend his complete satisfaction in the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. So small and yet so effective, they bid fair to supplant entirely the old-style pills. An ever-ready remedy for Sick and Bilious Headache, Bileousness, Constipation and all blood disorders. Mild in action, wonderful in effect! Put up in vials, convenient to carry. Their use attended with no discomfort! These sterling merits account for their great popularity.

The amount of salt necessary to be used in butter is generally accepted as one ounce of salt to one pound of butter; but in salting butter the state of the weather is to be considered as well as the preference of the market. In winter less salt is required, and in some markets butter that is very salt is not sold as readily as when less salt is used.

A FLAW IN THE LAW.—Client (in Chicago).—"I want a divorce." Lawyer.—"On what grounds?" "My wife cannot make good coffee." "I am sorry, but the law is not broad enough for me to get a decree on mere coffee grounds."

His skull was crushed and mangled in a terrible manner. He lived only five hours but in a state of entire unconsciousness. The boy's parents live at Hall's Run, above Reno.

—A Cannonsburg letter says: "Some sorghum molasses is still made in this region. It sells for about 60 cents a gallon wholesale, and grows ago a very large amount of sorghum was grown and the steam arising from the mills was an infrequent sight."

DYSPEPSIA.

INTENSE SUFFERING FOR 8 YEARS.

Few people have suffered more intensely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 102 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart

NAUSEA AND INDIGESTION. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for 8 years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to FEEL LIKE A NEW MAN. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased; the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. My strength returned, slowly at first and then rapidly. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle had been taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am to-day a well man and I ascribe it to the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla."

IMPORTANT.—If you cannot read this print distinctly by lamp or gaslight in the evening, at a distance of ten inches, your eyesight is failing, no matter what your age, and your eye needs help. Your sight can be improved and preserved if properly corrected. It is a wrong idea that spectacles should be dispensed with as long as possible. If they assist the vision, use them. There is no danger of seeing too well, so long as the print is not magnified; it should look natural size, but plain and distinct. Don't fail to call and have your eyes tested by King's New System, and fitted with Combination spectacles. They will correct and preserve the sight. For sale by F. C.
