THE OLD MAN DREAMS.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES Oh, for an hour of youthful joy! Give back my twentieth spring! I'd rather laugh a bright haired boy, Than reign a gray-haired king!

Off with the spoils of wrinkled age! Away with learning's crown! Tear out life's wisdom written page And dash its trophies down!

One moment let my life blood stream From boyhood's font of flame! Give me one giddy reeling dream Of life all love and fame.

My listening angel heard my prayer, And, calmly smiling, said, "It I but touch thy silvered hair, Thy hasty wish was sped.

'But is there nothing in thy track
To bid thee fondly stay,
While the swift seasons hurry back
To find the wished for day?

Ah truest soul of woman kind! Without thee what were life! One bliss I cannot Jeave behind

I'll-take-my-precious-wife The angel took a sapphire pen
And wrote in rainbow dew;
"The man would be a boy again
And be a husband, too!

"And there is nothing yet unsaid Before the change appears? emember, all their gifts have fled With these dissolving years."

"Why, yes, for memory would recall My fond paternal joys: I could not bear to leave them all; I'll-take-my-girls-and-boys!" |

Then the smiling angel dropped his pen— Why this will never do; The man would be a boy again, And be a father, too!

And so I laughed—my laughter woke
The househol with the noise—
And wrote my dream when morning broke
To please the gray-haired boys.

Despoiled in a Lonely Spot at the Gun's Muzzle-A Subsequent Meeting With

Detroit Free Press. When I stopped off at the Mammoth Cave House last fall to have a look at the big underground exposition, there were only a few guests in the house. Only one of them particularly attracted my attention, and he might not have done so had he not introduced himself, borrowed a cigar, offered me a sip of his cough medicine and otherwise exhibited his desire to be friendly. When we finally got seated for an interchange of views he claimed to be Colonel Henry Blanchard, late of a Tennessee regiment. That is, he was about 25 years late, having coloneled the regiment during the last years of the war. I think he also told me which side he fought on, and that he was an awful fighter, but just at that

The owner of it had got the idea that mammoth caves were going out of style, and would soon be a drug in the market, and would therefore sell out for a trifle--something like $50,000. Was I looking for an investment on which I could double my money in 30 days? I was. Would I take half of it? I would. If it had been a farm or a vine-yard or a yoke of cattle I might have hesitated, but one never runs any risk in buying a cave. It is right there. stands any climate. It is always healthy and productive. If it should fail as a cave, owing to some change of public sentiment, one can turn it into a cold storage, a State prison or a pirate's lair, and reap fair interest on the capital.

It was agreed that we should walk over to the cave next day, and it was further agreed that we keep the matter as still as death. There were other millionaires there and they might catch on. We were to set out at 8 A. M. so as to was awaiting me down stairs, and under tables for small parties is to have the

And never the less, such is the fact. "It is the most wonderful spring in the United States," said Special Officer Brodrick, of the Atlantic police force.

"To what spring do you refer?
"Indian Spring. I have taken three men to that spring who were so far gone on the liquor habit that it looked as if it was impossible for them to stop and every one of them was cured immediately. One of them had particularly been drunk for four months.

I took along a supply of whisky, as people said that it would kill him to "Did he taper off?" "He took one drink after he got to Indian Spring and then declined to touch a drop. He said he did not want it at all. He remained there three days and you never saw such a transformation. He was as sober as a judge, his face was cleared of its bloat and its red liquor look, and then he was himself again. Since that time he and has not touched a drop. That was six months ago, long enough to effectually settle the matter.

"Does it prove equally efficacious on others?" "I have tried three cases, and with the same happy results in every case-I believe that that little spring, which does not hold over a gallon of water, is one of the most valuable in the country, and worth all the hospitals in the land for the cure of inebriates."

"Why dont somebody ship the water? "In the first place, the spring belongs to the State of Georgia, and is just as the Indians left it, long ago. The State Government has never permitted anybody to lease it or enlarge the flow. The water is free to everybody. In second place, there a volatile gas in the water that escapes after an hour or two, rendering it flat, and robbing the water of its extraordinary qualities. For these reasons no attempt has ever been made to export it, and people are compelled to go to the spot to enjoy its benefits. It is a wonderful spring in many other respects, but it is the king of all liquor | habit cures that I have ever seen.
