Political Crime in Florida.

Forty-one Killed:

Philadelphia Record. There is no longer any doubt that the ecent murder of a United States Depty Marshal in Florida had some conlection with politics. Although Sauncers, the victim, was a violent and turtulent man, prone to engage himself in rersonal broils, certain circumstances dearly indicate the partisan cause of his ceath. But-as in most conflicts of this sort--there are two sides of this affair to

The Democrats control all the State and most of the county offices in Florida, at Mme. Sihyda's attempted escape, and while the machinery of Federal power became a victim of his brutality. She in the hands of Republicans, who was subjected to such atrocious treathave not been scrupulous as to the man-ner of exercising their authority. In-Mme. Sihyda, indignant and terror sisting that great frauds had been com- stricken by this awful event, vehementmitted in the recent elections, the Feder- ly denounced the outrage. In doing al officials instituted sweeping prosecu-tions against Democrats election officers in the United States Courts. Of this the Democrats did not complain; but sister. As evidence of the method of ly known that the number of killed procuring juries, a letter of this United to send the names of "true and tried Republicans" to serve as jurors.

For the purpose of aiding in the manipulation of the jury lists Judge Swayne removed the Democratic Commissioner director and order that official to report of Elections and appointed, in violation at St. Petersburg. of the spirit of the law, a nominal Democrat who was elected to the Legislature over the regular candidate of his party. The result of the scandalous work of these Federal officials was that the first Grand Jury drawn contained twentythree Republicans to one Democrat. The list of petit jurors contained one Democrat to ten Republicans. When the juries were thus secured the United States Marshal and his Deputies scoured Florida for the parties against whom indictments had been found. The more arrests, the more mileage and fees.

In these conditions was engendered the bad blood which caused the death of Saunders. The Federal officers in Florida have acted as violent and unscrupulous men who have shrunk from no means to attend their ends. Conceding that the charges of election frauds against the Democrats are true, this would not warrant or excuse the prostitution of the administration of justice by the partisans in whose hands the Federal authority has been placed by the Administration at Washington. Chicane and fraud in the manipulation of juries to try alleged partisan offenders have naturally been met by violence. Any other community, North or South, threatened with this species of perescution would not be likely to prove more critical than the people of Florida in choosing a means of defense. In fact, when the Courts of law are converted into engines of oppression a condition of anarchy is created in which the weapons of violence are eagerly sought for self-defense or for vengeance. Of course, the partisan organs have not been slow to make party capital out of this murder; but when both sides of the affair shall be fully understood by the

Col. McClure's Visit to Mr. Randall.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 .-- I called on Mr. Randall this afternoon and found him intently studying the new code of rules proposed in the House, a printed copy of which had just been sent to him. He is greatly interested in the battle over the rules and his recent set-back, that caused so much alarm among those who could not see him, and was made the basis of many sensational newspaper reports, was the logical result of nervous prostration, produced by his absorbing study of the minority report prepared by Mr. Carlisle after a careful study and perfect agreement between himself and Mr. Randall. What he most needs April: is rest, and that he cannot have while he s worried by the exciting struggle in the House. Mr. Randall was unusally bright this afternoon, and he discussed the rules framed by the majority of the committee and soon to be adopted by the House, in the most incisive manner. He pro-foundly deprecates the extreme to which the majority has gone to gain temporary power, and fears that the effect will b felt by all parties in the future. He sums up the changed rules as revolutionary in a parliamentary sense, and as thoroughly revolutionary in practical results as if they had been wrought by a coup d'etat, as they entirely destroy the power and responsibility of individual members, make the Speaker autocratic and force the committees subor dination to the will or caprice of the Speaker.

For the special session of court, beginning From the Washington Star: on the third Monday in March, the following "Put those in the members' boxes," said an old man staggering up to the window of the House Post Office the other day with an immense bundle of pamphlets. "Put a book in every box. Be sure you don't miss any.'

"What are they?" asked the young man at the window. "We can't take it unless it is something that the members are likely to want."

A Philanthropist's Gift to Congress,

"Want? Why, man alive, they must have it. Just let me tell you what it is.' He leaned forward and whispered something in the young man's ear and then stepped back to give him room to ex-pand with astonishment. "Yes sir, the brain! It is a treatise on the development of the brain. Why, man, the reputation of the nation depends on their having it at once !' The clerk tapped his forehead with his finger and laid the bundle aside for

A Claymont School Teacher Has a Novel Plan of Punishment.

The little town of Claymont, Del., has a sensation in the shape of the new teacher of the school, Samuel Roop, of Wilmington. Since 1805, when the wife. On Sunday afternoon he struck school-house was built and the school her on the head with a blunt instrument, school-house was built and the school opened, the use of the switch has been the rule for punishment. But when Mr. Roop was appointed a new state of affairs began. He found that a great deal of swearing was done by the boys, and that although punishment had been applied, it did no good. So he caught using profane language should be punished in a new way. The victim be punished in a new way. The victim was a little fellow of about 12 years of age, who had frequently committed the of-fense hefore and had heen punished who had frequently committed the of-fense before, and had been punished for it by being tied to a hook in a wall of a dark cellar under the school-house. This time, however, he was made to stand up before the whole school, and his mouth was washed out with a sponge his mouth was washed out with a sponge ance was offered. and cold water. His tongue was then scraped with a knife, and he was told never to use bad language again, and he has not done so.
