Medical.

I WAS ASTONISHED

SAYS A FATHER WHOSE CHILD WAS CURED BY HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla is taken to expel impurities and give vitality. Parents should read the following statement: "I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when 3 years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally, but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. One day I read in Hood's Item of a remarkable cure of a child by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I decided to try this medicine. To say that I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had upon her would be a mild way of expressing my feelings. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed this up with Hood's Olive Ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and healthy ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. T. Alexander, 28 Clearfield St., Portland, Me.

Tecumseh's Powder Horn.

Relics Which a Famous Contemporary of Daniel Boone Preserved Until His Death a Few Years Ago.

An interesting bit of the Indian war history of this vicinity is brought out by the presentation to Huff Post, G. A. R., at Lawrenceburg, Ind., of a powderhorn, once the property of the great Indian chieftain, Tecumseh.

This horn was carried slung across Tecumseh's shoulder in the famous battle of the Thames, in 1813.

It was presented to the post by Henry Morris, of Lawrenceburg. He is a son of William Morris, better known to Ohio Valley pioneers as "Indian Bill," who figured in many savage and bloody encounters.

After the great fight seventy-six years ago "Indian Bill" found the body of the slain warrior. The powder horn, still attached to the string around Tecumseh's neck, lay on his breast. The scout removed it and preserved it as the most sacred of his relics. At his death a few years ago he presented it to his son Henry, who has now given it to Huff Post, and it hangs on the wall in that organization's post.

The horn was cut from the head of the first buffalo Tecumseh killed. He carefully scraped and polished it, and displayed a great deal of skill and ingenuity in fitting a bottom to it and shaping the mouth. The entire surface of the receptacle is covered with Indian character and legends.

Mr. Morris has another and more gory and ghastly trophy of that famous battle. It is a strip of skin from the middle of Tecumseh's back. The old settlers felt about the same savage satisfaction in cutting up and mutilating the bodies of the slain red foes as the Indians did in their scalping. After taking the horn of Tecumseh's body old "Indian Bill" turned the Chieftain on his face, and with his scalping knife cut a strip of skin several inches wide off the warrior's back down the entire length. This strip was "cured" and for the remainder of Bill's life did service as a razor strap.

Indian Bill Morris, at the time of his death, in Switzerland County, Indiana, a few years ago, was 104 years old. When only 7 years old, living with his parents near what became the site of Lexington, Ky., he was stolen and carried into captivity by the Indians. Two white men were taken prisoners with him. When the party reached what is now Chillicothe, Ohio, then a great Indian encampment, the two white men were skinned alive by the squaws of the village and then slowly roasted to death. The boy was then made a slave by an old squaw, and suffered incredible hardships. When she died Bill fell to the lot of another old woman, who devised even more heinous treatment for him than his first mistress. Bill was washing hominy at the river one day, when he was about 15 years old, when the old woman struck him with a club. The infuriated lad wrenched the weapon from her and dealt her a blow that knocked her senseless into the stream and she drowned. The boy was followed for three days and nights by the savages, and finally escaped by hiding himself in a hollow log that was floating down the Ohio River with other driftwood. When he finally reached the settlement of Cincinnati he narrowly escaped being shot for an Indian, so closely did he resemble one. He finally got back to his parents, who had long mourned him dead. From that long captivity among the Indians he got that implacable hatred of the red man which distinguished him in after life.

For years in company with Daniel Boone and other noted pioneers, Bill followed little else than Indian trails, and no less game than a savage red skin satisfied his hatred. He was one of the bravest soldiers under Colonel Dick Johnson, and killed nine Indians himself in the battle of the Thames. When he saw Tecumseh fall under the unerring aim of a comrade, he rushed forward and secured the powder-horn and the strip of skin of the dead Chief's back.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

LIFE IN PIZEN CREEK.—Missionary (just arrived, to the mayor of Pizen Creek) —I am very sorry to find that there is no suitable place for a young man to spend his evenings. I mean to try and— Mayor Rattler (becoming excited)—Smitten Washington! no place for a young man to spend his evenings, hey? Ain't you heard of my Square Faro Bank on Choteau avenue? There's a place for a young man to stay all night if he's got the dust and sand! Roaring Jehoshaphat! what's your idea of a suitable resort for a young man?

Barnum Was Sure of Being There.

It is said that a rather pompous minister once met P. T. Barnum, the circus manager, and said to him: "Mr. Barnum, you and I have met before on the temperance platform, and I hope we shall meet in Heaven." "We shall," replied Barnum, confidently, "if you're there."

Ingenuity of Tramps.

"The tramp is no fool," remarked a Nankine township farmer, when the matter was under discussion the other day, to a Detroit Free Press reporter. "What's your experience with him?" was asked.

"An average of three per day come along to my place," was the reply, "and it keeps the whole family busy to get them from other people. He used to demand food as a fire starter or other unfortunates, but we has something to beat that now. For instance, a well-dressed man dropped in on us the other forenoon and wanted to buy the farm. He looked it over, examined my deeds, beat me down $500 and then left for Kalamazoo to get the money. He got dinner, supper, lodging and breakfast out of us free, for he was only a tramp. Three days later a fellow came along, asked me to set him out a 50-cent dinner and when through eating said he wanted to make a confident man of me. He took me out to the barn and informed me that a friend of his buried $2000 in gold in my orchard ten years ago. This man wanted permission to dig, and would give me $200 to aid him."

"And you found the money?" "He hung about for two days, always contriving that I should do the most work and then slipped away to be heard of no more."

Talmage Demands Pay in Advance.

From the Atlanta Constitution. Dr. Talmage, the great syndicate preacher, is said to have made a fortune and most of his earnings have been made as a lecturer. He demands a good round sum, and he makes the manager square up before he will talk. His unvarying rule is "settle before you lecture and avoid misunderstanding."

PUFF PASTE.—One quart of flour, one pint of butter, one tablespoonful of salt, one of sugar, one and a quarter cupfuls of ice water. Wash the hands carefully, dip them into very hot, and cold boiling water and then cold. Fill it half full with cold water. Wash the butter in this, working it with hands until it is light and waxly. This frees it of the salt and buttermilk, and lightens it so that the pastry is more delicate. Shape the butter into two thin cakes and put in a pan of ice water to harden. Mix the salt and sugar with the flour. With the hands rub one third of the butter into the flour and add the water, stirring with a knife. Stir quickly until the paste is a smooth ball. Sprinkle the board lightly with flour. Turn the paste on this and pound lightly with the rolling-pin. Do not break the paste. Roll from you and to one side. When it is one-fourth of an inch thick, wipe the remaining butter, break it into bits and spread on the paste. Sprinkle lightly with flour. Fold the paste one-third from each side so that the edges meet, and fold from the ends, but do not let them meet. Double the paste, pound lightly and roll down to about one-third of an inch in thickness. Fold as before and roll again. Repeat this three times if for pies and six times for tarts or patties. It should be in the ice-chest at least an hour before it is used. If the weather is warm and the paste sticks when being rolled down put it on a tin sheet and place on the ice. The less flour used in rolling the more tender it will be. No matter how carefully you do part of the work is done the paste will not be good if much flour is used. For chopped paste take the same materials, with a little less flour; put them all in a chopping tray, chop until all are mixed; then add a scant cupful of water, a little at a time, and continue chopping. When well mixed, sprinkle the board with flour, turn the paste onto it, and roll in to a flat piece. Put on the ice, and when hard use the same as puff paste.

The huge Winter Palace at St. Petersburg, with the exception of the Vatican and Versailles, is the largest palace in the world intended for a residence, and though tasteless and mediocre, has a certain grandeur for its immensity. Like all the Russian palaces, the Winter Palace is a mixture of splendor and shabbiness, luxury and discomfort. In going over it visitors see everything gorgeously adapted for state occasions but wonder how and where the imperial family can live. The whole of the splendid interior was consumed by fire in 1857, but speedily repaired. It is said that not less than 6,000 persons have frequently had a habitation in the Winter Palace.

No Risk Run.—Big Hotel Proprietor—Yes sir, your bill, sir, is $10. Been here one day exactly. Stranger—I am short of change, but here is a check for $50, which— "Um—I don't like to cash checks for strangers. How much change have you about you?" "Not over seventy-five cents." "Well, give me that and we'll call it square. Can't afford to lose anything these hard times."

"Farewell, dearest," she sighed, as she lay against the lapel of this double-breasted coat, "and, George, you may kiss me once on my forehead ere you go." "Thanks, Argolina," thoughtfully murmured the young man, "but the last time I kissed a girl on the forehead I got a bang in my mouth." A moment later he left the house, looking as if he had been eating marsh-mallows.

The principal sea fish that serve as nourishment to the human race are the skate or ray, the shark family, the sturgeon, the tunny, the mackerel, the codfish, the herring, the sardine, the anchovy, the salmon and the eel. Some readers may be surprised to see the shark included, but it is a numerous family and all are not man-eaters. The shark fishery is a regularly established industry in some parts of the world.

All medical authorities agree that catarrh is no more or less than an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nasal air passages. Nasal catarrh and catarrhal affections of the head are not diseases of the blood, and it is a serious mistake to treat them as such. No conscientious physician ever attempts to do so. It is held by eminent medical men that sooner or later a specific will be found for every disease from which humanity suffers. The facts justify us in assuming that for catarrh at least a positive cure already exists in Ely's Cream Balm.
