SOME TIME.

Last night, my darling, as you slept, I thought I heard you sigh, And to your little crib I crept...

Little Stories of Animals.

A Dog That Died for a Fool Master.

I have never let any of my dogs retrieve birds since an experience I had with a cruel sportsman over on the Delaware river late one fall...

"I begged the man to call him back and let the minks have the quail, but he wouldn't listen to me. Again he ordered the dog to fetch the quail in, and again the dog made an effort to reach it, but the ice cracked and he turned about, whining piteously, and in every way that he knew how begged his master to call him back...

While hunting partridges near Round Swamp, in Drifton township, last fall, Aaron Bidgood saw a fox scrambling around in a mud puddle at a great rate. He was interested in the animal's queer antics, and after he had watched the lively fox for awhile he came to the conclusion that it was catching frogs, or at least trying to catch them...

When Bidgood had looked at the cunning frog eaters as long as he cared to, he yelled, and the two mud covered foxes floundered out of the puddle in a hurry and scampered directly toward the clump of bushes where the hunter was concealed. They were very much frightened, and the mud on their busy tails and in their long fur kept their speed down considerably...

VALUABLE INFORMATION.—For the third time little Tommy Fig had asked his father what was the cause of the desert of Sahara. Finally the old man laid down his paper and answered: "I reckon it was formed when the Israelites lost their sand. And if you don't quit asking me so many questions, I'll see that your mother puts you to bed before I get home hereafter."

PECULIAR IN MEDICINAL merit and wonderful cures—Hod's Sarsaparilla. Now is the time to take it, for now it will do the most good.

Abe Blew to Beat Stevens.

We were riding along a Kentucky highway when we came to a mule and cart backed up to a farm-house gate, and one of the two men with it halted us and said:

"Stranger, I reckon you'll be willing to stop and give us a lift on this thing in the cart."

We expressed our willingness, and were shocked to discover that "this thing" was the dead body of a young man.

"It's my son Abe," exclaimed the man, who was a typical Kentuckian about 60 years old.

"But is he really dead?"

"Dead as a crowbar, gentlemen."

"Killed by some accident?"

"No, sir; busted to death by his own durned foolishness. Let's git the body into the house and I'll explain."

We carried it in and laid it on a bed in the sitting room. The wife and mother wasn't home, and as soon as the body was decently cared for the man accompanied us to the door and said:

"The undertaker will be along purty soon, and I've sent for the old woman, who is seven miles away. Now, then, as to how he died. It's market day in town, you know, and me and Abe went over. There was a feller there with one of them blowing machines, and the minute Abe saw it he was dead gone."

"Do you mean a lung tester?"

"Reckon it was. You blow into it and a pinter flies round a dial to tell how many pounds you blew."

"Yes."

"Well, Abe was gone on it, and I was holding him back, when one of the Stevenses stepped up and blew. It was Budd Stevens, and Budd and Abe didn't hitch, you know. They were alers like two dogs, ready to fight, but waitin' for the hat to drop. Budd made that pinter hump for dear life, and the crowd yelled and applauded. Then Abe says to me:

"Dad, it won't never do to back down fur a Stevens. I've got to beat that blow or we'll lose our respectability."

"Abe, you let it alone," says I. "We've got mo' doggone respectability in five minutes than the Stevenses have in a hull year."

"But I kin beat it, dad."

"Spoin' ye kin? What's the blowing pinter around amount to? That hain't jumpin', or shootin', or fightin', is it?"

"But, gentlemen, that 'ere Abe felt sore to see that 'ere Budd struttin' around, and he took advantage of my goin' into a saloon after a drink. He stepped up, laid down his nickel, and he told the boys he'd beat Budd all holler or dust. He sucked in enough wind to blow a barn over, got a purchase in the gravel with his feet, and then let her go."

"Died! Why, dog-gone him, he busted hisself all apart in five or six places, and he couldn't help but die! There was a ripping and a tearing, and Abe cried out: 'Oh! I'm dead!' and fell back as dead as a June bug in January. That's the story, gentlemen, and I'm much obliged for the lift. Good day to you."

"But I kin beat it, dad."

Yes, he loves you now, 'tis true,

Lips as sweet as honey-dew, Bonny little bride! Will he love you as he did, When your golden locks are gray,— Will his love abide?

Yes, if it is the true kind it will survive all the inevitable wastes and changes of life. But it is every woman's desire and duty to retain, as long as she can, the attractions that made her charming and beloved in youth. No one can keep her youthful bloom or equable temper if weighed down and suffering from female weakness and disorders. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy for these troubles. Sold by druggists.

A BAKED HAM.—Scrub the ham thoroughly with a toy scrubbing brush and scrape the lower part. Soak in water that will more than cover it all night. Boil it until the skin will slip off easily. Then lay it in the dripping pan with a pint of vinegar. Bake every fifteen minutes. Bake four hours. Half an hour before it is done take it out and cover thickly with powdered white sugar and a layer of ground cinnamon, mixed with a little nutmeg and red pepper. Return it to the oven to brown, and glaze with the sugar. To skin it as directed, before baking, hold in one hand while hot, and with a damp cloth in the other hand loosen the skin from the bone, turn it back and draw it off in one piece.

AN OFFENSIVE BREATH.—Is most distressing, not only to the person afflicted if he have any pride, but to those with whom he comes in contact. It is a delicate matter to speak of, but it has parted not only friends but lovers. Bad breath and catarrh are inseparable. Dr. Sarge's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases as thousands can testify.

HIS KIND ADVICE.—Tommy is a little 5-year-old up-town, boy who does not feel the enthusiastic love for his maid-ant aunt that her virtues should inspire, but a certain sense of family decency forbids him wholly to ignore, in his evening petitions, her claims on a heavenly protection. A few nights ago, after some unusual antagonism between them, Tommy was saying his prayers for the night. When he reached the point where he usually mentions his aunt, he paused a moment and then said: "And then, there's Aunt Lucy, but I tell you, Lord, the less you have to do with her, the better!"—New York Sun.

IT WORKED LIKE A CHARM.—Life Insurance Agent—"Come, can't I place some insurance on your life? We're all liable to die at any moment, you know."

Citizen (who has had three other agents to see him since reaching his office)—"That's so. Life is uncertain, and it is especially so with me. My physician says I am liable to drop off at any moment with heart disease. He gives me only a couple of months to live."

Life Insurance Agent—"Oh! excuse me. There is no need of pursuing the subject. Let me try to have troubled you. Good morning."

Citizen—"By Jove! That idea of mine works like a charm."—Boston Courier.

According to the New York Sun base ball professionals are well paid. In 1881 J. W. O'Rourke was paid a salary of $2,000. In 1882 T. J. Keefe was paid $2,400. In 1883 and in 1884 William Ewing headed the list with an annual salary of $3,000. O'Rourke came to the front again with $4,500. In 1886 and in 1887 Fred Dunlap was paid $4,500, and in 1888 the same player received $7,000—the largest salary that was ever paid to any base ball player. In 1889 Ewing and Dunlap each received $6,000. Other salaries have risen proportionally.

CREAM OF BEETS.—This is one of the most delicious of spring soups. Boil a very red beet, and mash enough of it through a sieve to make half a cupful of pulp. Bring two quarts of milk to the boiling point in a double boiler; in another saucepan melt a large tablespoonful of butter and stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour; when smooth, add the boiling milk slowly; season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg; add enough of the pulp of the beet to give it a pretty pink color, and press through a sieve into a tureen.

Mrs. Wickwire—"Why don't you quit that stupid habit you've got of saying 'I love you'?"

Mr. Wickwire—"I will, if you will stop saying 'I love you' every time you are spoken to. What do you know about ideas, anyway?"

THE LONGEVITY OF BIRDS.—The longest lived bird, and it is asserted that it has reached the age of three hundred years. Knauer, in his work entitled "Naturhistoriker," states that he has seen a falcon that was 162 years old. The following examples are cited as to the longevity of the eagle and vulture. A sea eagle captured in 1715, and already several years of age, died 104 years afterward, in 1819; a white headed vulture, captured in 1706, died in 1826 in one of the aviaries of Schoenbrunn castle, near Vienna, where it had passed 118 years in captivity.

Parrots and ravens reach an age of over one hundred years. The life of sea and marsh birds sometimes equals that of several human generations. Like many other birds, magpies live to be very old in a state of freedom, but do not reach over 20 or 25 years in captivity. The domestic cock lives from 15 to 20 years, and the pigeon about 10. The nightingale lives but 10 years in captivity, and the blackbird 15. Canary birds reach an age of from 12 to 15 years in the cage, but those flying at liberty in their native islands reach a much more advanced age.

Frederick William Evans, who for many years has been the Presiding Elder of the Shakers in America, lives in rigid simplicity at New Lebanon, N. Y., on the estate of 4000 acres which the Shakers have owned since 1770. He is 82 years old, but is still vigorous in body and mind.
