THE CLOVER.

Some sing of the lily, and daisy and rose, And the pansies and pinks that the sum-mer-time throws In the green, grassy lap of the medder that Blankin up at the skies through the sunshiny days. But what is the lily, and all of the rest Of the flowers, to a man with a heart in his breast, That was dipped brimmin' full of the honey Of the sweet clover blossoms his babyhood

I never set eyes on a clover field now, Er fool round a stable, or climb in the But my childhood comes back jest as clear and as plain As the smell of the clover I'm sniffin' again; And I wonder away in a bare-footed dream, Whare I tangle my toes in the blossoms that gleam

With the dew of the dawn of the morning

Ere it wept o'er the graves that I'm weep-in' above. And so I love clover; it seems like a part Of the sacredest sorrows and joys of my And wharever it blossoms, oh, there let me And thank the good God as I'm thankin' Him now!
And I pray to Him still for the stren'th
when I die,
To go out in the clover and tell it good-bye,
And lovin'ly nestle my face in its bloom While my soul slips away on a breth of perfume. Nests of American Birds.

The nests of birds are among the most curious and wonderful things in nature. From the coarse and substantial nest constructed by the robin to the beautiful pendent home of the oriole, all are wonders of skill, worked by the tiny architects that flit about our gardens

Several species construct pouch or bag shaped nests, pendent from some twig or limb. The most beautiful of these nests is that of the oriole, which is swung at the end some long branch, reaching toward the ground. The birds will take any suitable material they can "lay hands on." An anecdote is related of a pair that, being regularly supplied with various shades of colored yarn by an experimenter, constructed a nest wholly of this material and beautifully shaded from top to bottom. Another species which constructs a pendent nest is the vireo. It is a very fragile cup suspended from a crotched twig, and may contain three or four dainty little eggs. This snug home is often broken in upon by the cowbird, who smuggles in one or more spelled "feable." of her own coarse eggs. Despite the difference in size and appearance, the strange egg is tended with care by the deluded foster parents, though eventually it is the undoing of their own off-

A number of birds, including the woodpecker, the nuthatch, the bluebird and many others, construct their nest in the wood of trees, either choosing some natural cavity or hollowing out one with the bill. The woodpeckers follow the bare chips at the bottom of the cavi-ty. Most birds, however, form a nest inside the hole. The crested flycatcher is one of these and an old snake skin invariably enters into the composition of the nest. Some writers go so far as to say that they leave the snake skin at the entrance to the hole in their abscence, but this is improbable. This curious habit is supposed by some to be a trick to intimidate animals and keep them away from the nest. Every one is familiar with the dainty bluebird, bearing, as Burroughs says, "the sky on his back and the earth tint on his breast." The bluebird is wedded to civilization, and no place pleases him so well in which to rear his nestlings as a bird box in a garden. He can put up, however, with a hole in an apple tree if nothing else offers.

Another bird whose nesting habits are peculiar is the bank swallow. These birds gather in colonies and choose some convenient bank, in which each pair sinks a burrow two to four feet deep, which takes about two weeks. The same birds frequently return to a bank year after year. At the end of the burrow a nest is formed of straws and feathers. The young birds are thus snugly protected from wind and rain .-Journal of Education.

She Found Out.

"I was never so flustered and perplexed as I was the other day," said a lady to me. "I was coming from Chicago, and in the car I met an old friend of my school days. I was very glad to meet him; so was he, I think, to meet me, and anyhow we indulged in a host of reminis ences. But I was uncomfortable from the very first, because I could not remember his name. I did remember that at school we used to call him Dumpy because of his somewhat diminu tive and stocky appearance, but I could not address a middle aged gentleman, enough, goodness knows."-Boston a wealthy financier, by such a name. TO VARY THE MONOTONY-"Your duties must be somewhat monotonous,' said a lady to a mailing clerk.

"They are, indeed." "The same round day after day and week after week No excitement.

"No excitement excepting when we have to rush things.' 'And when is that?"

"When we find 'In haste' written on the corner of an envelope." "Oh! yes, that creates excitement! "Tremendous !"

The Earth is Drying Up.

All rivers and small streams are visi oly smaller than they were twenty-five years ago. Country brooks in which men now living were accustomed to fish and bathe in their boyhood have, in many cases, totally disappeared in consequence of the failure of springs and rains which once fed them. The levei of the great lakes is falling year by year. There are many piers on the shores of lakeside cities which vessels once appaoached with ease, but which now scarcely reach the water's edge. Harbor surveyors will tell you that all harbors are shallower than they were even a decade ago. This is not due to the gradual deposit of earth brought down by the rivers, as some may suppose, nor to the refuse from the city sewers. The harbor of Toronto has almost ceased to be of use, despite the fact that it has been dredged out to the permanent bottom rock.

The Popes.

Leo XIII is the 253 pope, a fact—seldom thought of when the great pontiff's name is mentioned. Of the total 253 uccessors of St. Peter 15 have been Frenchmen, 13 have been Greeks. 8 have been Syrians, 6 have claimed Germany as their birthplace, 5 have hailed from Spain, 2 were from Africa, 2 from Savoy, which was also the number sent from England, Sweden, Dalmatia, Holland, Portugal and Crete. Italy caps the climax with a total of 194, all since 1523 having been selected from among the Italian cardinals. Eight of the number did not live a month after succession; 40 lived less than a year, and 23 more died when they had been less than two years on the pontifical throne; 54 between four and five years ; 57 when they had reigned less than ten years; 51 before they had finished their fifteenth year, and 18 died after reigning between 15 and 20 years. Only nine lived over 20 years after their elevation to the "Chair of St. Peter." Pius IX, who died during the early part of 1878, reigned longer than any of his predecessors, his pontifical life extending over a period of 31 years.

People Who Can't Spell.

Distinguished and Educated Persons Who Misspell their English.

A clever young Harvard instructor was once heard to say, "I really never dare correct a student's misspelling till I have looked in the dictionary."

The Pace of the Camel

As a matter of fact, and in spite of its having carried Mohammed in four leaps from Jerusalem to Mecca, seven miles an hour is the camel's limit; nor can it maintain this rate over two hours Its usual speed is five miles an hour-a slow pace beyond which it is danger-ous to urge it, lest, as Asiatics say, if might break its heart and die literally on the spot. When a camel is pressed beyond this speed, and is spent, it kneels down, and not all the wolves in Asia will make it budge again. The camel remains where it kneels, and where it kneels it dies. A fire under its nose is useless.

A Girl's Way of Getting Even.

A fashionable doctor having a house on Fifth avenue prides himself upon the favor with which he is regarded by women. In this respect he is decidedly unadmirable, but his skill as a physician enables him to stand high in his profession in spite of his conceit. The other day he received a summons to call on a young woman famed for her beauty. She was a new patient for him, and, as he arranged his cravat before entering his carriage, he fancied himself on the brink of an unusual conquest. Reaching the house, he was shown into the reception room, where, a moment later, he was joined by the you might be able to remove it.' With freezing dignity the doctor got out of the house as quickly 'as he could.

"He had expressed a desire to meet me," said the beauty, speaking of the matter afterward to a friend, "and he did so in a very insulting way. I was told of it, and I decided to give him an opportunity to form my acquaintance.'

GREAT LITTLE MEN .-- Some of the greatest men that ever lived were of small stature and insignificant appearance. The reader will readily recall many instances. Very small are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, but they are far more effective than the huge old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle and never cause constipation. For liver, stomach and bowel derangement they have no equal.
