To MY FELLOW DEMOCRATS.—Although the Democratic county convention did not favor me with a nomination for Sheriff, I return my thanks to the many Democrats who favored me with their votes at the primary election and enabled me to enter the convention with a respectable number of delegates, of which I had reason to be proud. If I had been nominated I would have expected the united support of the party. Therefore I pledge myself to support the entire ticket, and consider it the duty of all good Democrats to give a hearty support to the gentlemen whom the county convention has nominated.

CHANGE IN THE REYNOLDS BANKING COMPANY.—Something of a sensation was produced in financial circles in this neighborhood last Monday by the announcement of a change in the old and reliable banking firm of W. F. Reynolds & Co., which is to be brought about by the retirement of Maj. Wm. F. Reynolds and Mr. W. Fred Reynolds, and the connection of F. W. Crider and Gen. D. H. Hastings with a new firm at the old place, Geo. W. Jackson remaining. This reconstruction will take place on the 1st of September and the name of Reynolds will be dissociated from a banking institution with which it has been so long and so honorably connected. The bank will be continued under the new firm name of Jackson, Crider & Hastings.

It was in 1859 that Major Reynolds and Mr. George W. Jackson embarked in the banking business and commenced a financial career which has been eminently successful. There was no banking firm in the State that was more correct and reliable in its transactions, and none that stood higher in financial circles, or had a larger share of the confidence of those who did business with it. This was due to the substantial character of Major Reynolds, and in a large degree to the ability of Mr. Jackson who in addition to unusual capacity as a financier, possessed the integrity which is the most serviceable quality in a banker, for upon it rests the confidence of the public, without which a banking institution cannot flourish. Under his guidance and supervision we have no doubt the success of the new firm will equal that of the old.

In Memoriam.

DIED.—Near West Union, Iowa, July 2, 1890, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth, wife of Philip A. Barnhart, aged 61 years, 5 months and 9 days. The subject of this notice was born in Lycoming county, Pa. She lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Antis, until May 21, 1861, when she was married and came with her husband to Centre county, where she lived in what is called Kennedy until she had become attached to the neighbors. In the spring of 1865 she moved with her husband to the State of Iowa where they have since resided. She belonged to a large connection many of whom have lived in Centre county and are still living at Roland and elsewhere. She had been a member of the Methodist church for 40 years, and the day before she died had been to conference to which she had greatly desired to go to meet Bishop Bowman who had been her pastor in her younger days at Jersey Shore. But the heart had been weakened by disease and that night it ceased to act, and our dear one was gone, leaving the loved husband and son to mourn their loss while she was borne away to the waiting little ones who had gone long before. But how true it is. Friend after friend departs, who hath not lost a friend? There is no union here of hearts but knows while here an end.

In Memory of Mrs. Hogan.

Mrs. Murry Hogan, who died at Howard on the 2nd inst. of old age and after effects of the grippe, was born September 1st, 1830, and was the oldest inhabitant of the town at the time of her death. Her husband, Mr. Murry Hogan, who was a contractor at the time the canal was built, came to Howard, bought a home and settled there in 1836. She was the mother of ten children, only three of whom survive her: Frank Hogan, of Hutchinson, Kansas, and James Hogan and Mrs. Kate McKinney, of Howard. Her husband died 24 years ago, since which time she lived with her daughter, Mrs. McKinney, in the old homestead at Howard, where she died.

She was of a most genial and happy disposition and although old in years those who were with her never associated with her the idea of death. She could entertain the young as well as the aged, and often would they gather around her and hear her tell of bygone days. She was every child's grandma. Her charity and benevolence were unbounded, she having served all in sickness, sorrow and death. She lived and died in the Catholic faith, received all the rites of consolation that the church could give and was buried in the Bellefonte Catholic cemetery. When death came it was indeed a struggle for her friends to give her up.

Pine Grove Mentions. Little George, youngest son of Dr. G. H. Woods, is not expected to survive from a severe attack of cholera infantum. Doctress Miss Mary Struble, who has been attending a Philadelphia Medical institution for the past year, is now greeting her former friends under the parental roof of her father, C. H. Struble.

Miss Kate Moser, one of Altoona's most practical and experienced teachers, pleasantly spent a few days here among her old school-day associates, looking as well and cheerful as ever.

The fellow who ate fourteen ears of corn for supper evidently did not take into consideration the shortage of the crop caused by the high temperature and scarcity of rain fall, which has also blighted the potato crop, indicating a very light yield, if not almost a failure.

The primaries held last Saturday were unusually quiet and harmonious, with a very large vote out. But one set of delegates were voted for, and no special contest was made for any of the many good candidates who offered their services as public servants of the people.

The nominations made at Tuesday's convention are being well received in this end of the county. The ticket is certainly a strong one and will produce harmony in the Democratic ranks all over the county, which will insure the election of the whole ticket to the old time majorities of from twelve to fifteen hundred. Our Republican friends already see the hand writing on the wall. Boys, whoop her up for McCormick and the whole ticket.

Wanted to Marry His Sister Under a Misapprehension. NEWARK, N. J., August 11.—Sensational productions of writers of fiction pale almost into insignificance in connection with a story that came to the surface in Irvington, two miles west of Newark, yesterday. A woman's dread secret is revealed by herself, under pressure of dire necessity, to her only son.

The revelation breaks the young man's heart. The story, in a nutshell, is that a brother and sister fall deeply in love with each other, and become engaged, in delightful ignorance of their ties of kindred. The agonized mother at last tells the boy of her life's story. The young man rushes from the house and attempts to send a bullet through his brain.

The oldest residents of Essex county well remember Thomas J. Collins as a wealthy real estate owner of Irvington, which twenty years ago was known as Compton. The old homestead rested near the banks of the Elizabeth river, a tributary of the Rahway. The romance brought to light in such a tragic manner at Irvington last night began three years prior to Collins' death. Collins there formed the acquaintance and married Mrs. Emily Goodwin, a young and pretty widow, who had sustained herself and niece after the death of her husband by reading proofs in a newspaper office and by articles contributed to a Brooklyn paper. They took up their residence at Irvington, and in the course of time a son, Henry, was born.

Mrs. Collins niece, Nellie Richardson, who was two years Henry's senior, became a member of the household. On July 4, two years ago, Henry, then a handsome young fellow of 17, told his mother that he had won Nellie's love, and she had promised to become his bride at an early day. She besought her son not to think of marrying so young, but to take a two years trip abroad and on his return he could claim his bride. The young people were suitors and agreed that it would be just as well for Henry to see the world and study some before settling down.

During her son's absence the mother sought by introducing Nellie into society to have her forget Henry and form a deeper attachment for some one else, but the young lady was true to the absent lover. Yesterday the young man arrived in New York, and two hours later presented himself at the homestead. As soon as Henry had settled himself he was sent for by the mother. He found her on her knees in her bed room, weeping bitterly. She confessed to having deceived Thomas Collins years ago. Her niece was none other than her daughter. They were therefore, brother and sister.

Henry arose and, running from the house, fled to a remote section of the grounds. In a short time the report of a pistol was heard. Realizing the truth, Mrs. Collins dashed through the fields, followed by Nellie Richardson, who wondered what it all meant. Henry was found bleeding and unconscious on the ground. He was removed to his home and his wound examined. It was found that the bullet had ploughed a furrow through the scalp, but had barely fractured the skull. The young man died freely but will shortly recover.

It is next to impossible to see any of the parties concerned. The house is shrouded in gloom and only the physician is allowed admission. The story was told by Mrs. Collins in her wild despair.
