HEART FEELINGS.

What doth it mean? A flashing eye, That weary drooping brow, Those hurried, bl. e., veined words...

The Algerian Lion.

His Magnificent Strength and Courage.

We knew little about the lion till M. Jules Gerard, an officer of the French army in Algeria, made that animal his study, and enlightened us. We hardly knew what the lion was like to begin with; for we judged of him by the specimens we see in menagerie cages...

Lions usually mate about the end of January; but so many lionesses are cut off in infancy by teaching that there are always many more males than females, and so the lion has considerable difficulty in providing himself with a wife...

His Was Vinegar. A camp meeting was held last week in the woods near Tioesta, a pleasant little town on the Allegheny river about twenty miles above Oil City. One day one of the preachers was strolling through the woods when he came upon a jug of whiskey. He picked it up and carried it to the pulpit and when the people again assembled for services he placed it upon the stand. Silence prevailed instantly.

When the preacher sat down Grubb, who was sitting away back, slowly arose and went forward. Grubb has a stiff leg which makes an angle of about thirty degrees with his body, and every step he takes he rises and falls like a wagon going over a stump. But on he went, up the long aisle to the pulpit. Every eye was upon him.

Such, Gerard tells us, is the heartless conduct of lioness wives in general, while they are always treated with faithfulness and affection by their lords. The lion is, in fact, the one slave of his wife. She always takes precedence; when she stops, he stops. On arriving at the lions' a collection of Arab tents, which we would call a "village," where they expect to find their supper, she lies down while he leaps into the inclosure and brings to her the booty. He watches her with satisfaction while she eats, taking care that no one shall disturb her repast; and not until her appetite is satisfied does he begin his meal.

At the age of 4 or 5 months the young ones follow their mother to the border of the forest, where their father brings their supper. When 6 months old, they accompany father and mother in all nocturnal expeditions. From 8 to 12 months, under their parent's tuition, they learn to attack sheep, goats, and even bulls, but they are so awkward that they usually wound ten for one they kill; and it is not till they are two years old that they can kill a horse or a bull scientifically—that is to say, with but a single grip in the throat. While their education is thus in progress they are dreadfully thious to the Arabs, since the family does not content itself with killing the cattle required for its own consumption, but kill that the children may learn how to kill. At 3 years old the young ones quit home and set up for themselves, becoming fathers and mothers in their turn.

Stephen's Homestead. Strange things occur every day, and nothing is stranger than the mutations of fortunes and condition. Truth is stranger than fiction. If some poet or novelist should describe the spectacle of a negro possessing the estate of the late Jefferson Davis we should dash it aside as a product of a fertile imagination, and yet the former home, in Marietta, of the late Alexander H. Stephens is owned by a negro. Mr. Frank Rogers of Marietta has recently purchased the Stephens mansion, and is now repairing and renovating it for his own private residence. To think that the former home of the Vice President of the so-called Confederate States of America should become the property of a negro seems romantic. The retreat where the "Great Commoner" thought his best thoughts, conceived his brilliant campaigns, and composed his most eloquent speeches, is now resonant with the pattering and prattling voices of children, the offspring of negro parents. Out of that same old mansion may some day come a genius, the descendant of the whose brilliance shall eclipse that of the "Great Commoner," and whose life shall not be coupled with a "lost cause."

A Happy and Favored Spider. Far up in the corner of my room is a big black cobweb, and a big black spider dwells therein. He has dwelt there quite a year now, and although many surreptitious feminine glances of horror at the wretched housekeeping of some people steal up to that corner, my happy spider is never disturbed. I think he almost loves me now; he comes down often, dropping inch by inch, by a thin golden thread, and he runs rapidly and twinkling-legged over my table and papers, pausing for moments at a time to look at me with bright, unwinning eyes and motionless body.

102 Years Old. Captain Jack Haynes, the engineer in charge of the elevator engine at the Fagan building, is 102 years old. As he stood in front of the structure the other morning to one would have placed his age over sixty-five years, and there would even have been some misgivings as to his being quite so venerable. Nevertheless, it was in 1787 that the old engineer came into the world, his birthplace being in the then unsettled region of Tennessee. Like nearly all Tennesseans, the centenarian is a six-footer, chews tobacco, and loves a good story. He is active, healthy, spare in figure and only slightly bent with his wonderful weight of years, and possesses the eyesight of a frontiersman.—St. Louis Republic.

Medicinal. AWFUL SKIN DISEASE. CHILD A MASS OF RAW BLEEDING SORES. MIRACULOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES. A face, from the hair to the neck on both sides, a raw mass of bleeding sores; two little hands and arms in the same condition; a body around the waist of which was a broad band of bleeding eruptions, and from the hips to the tips of her toes the skin was so raw as to be abraded by the slightest touch. Such was the frightful condition of the little four-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Stout, of Danville, Va., when I first saw her, about two months ago. At that time I was clerking in the drug store of C. W. Woolver, had much faith in the Cuticura Remedies, and resolved to try them on her. I could not bear to see the little one suffer as a new child.
