How Air You, Judge?

The lack of conventionality in Judge Gresham's court frequently results in some amusing situations. The other day the Judge was in his room in the Federal building hearing an argument by A. C. Harris in an important case, when the door opened and in walked a countryman from Harrison county, Judge Gresham's home. The visitor was a well preserved specimen of an independent farmer. His face, unshaven, was round and chubby; he wore a broad white hat; he was without collar, and his clothing and shoes showed yellow clay. He spit some "amber" when inside the door, and without noticing Attorney Harris or the other occupants of the room walked up to Judge Gresham with:

"Well, how air you, judge? How's all the folks? I was in town on a little business, and I knew the folks down home would like to hear from you, so I came up to see you a little while."

Attorney Harris halted at a period in his argument, when, with both arms outstretched, he was about to clinch a point; he looked at the intruder a motion beckoned to Deputy Marshal Conroy to have the man to take off his hat.

Judge Gresham apparently did not notice the embarrassment of the attorneys and spectators. He arose from his chair, took his visitor by the hand, called him by his given name, asked him about his family, also calling them by name, and said he was glad he had come.

He chatted pleasantly with the old gentleman for several minutes, asking him about many Harrison County people and seemed to enjoy the call. All this time the attorneys and the deputy marshal were bewildered. The latter half feared it was his duty to prevent such an interruption of court, but he hesitated about moving. The farmer stood talking with the judge as freely as he would have conversed with his nearest neighbor over a rail fence, and when he was ready to go, he said:

"Well, good luck to you, judge, come down and see us." And he walked out independently as he had come in.

The judge resumed hearing the case as if nothing had happened.—Indianapolis News.

A Funny Problem.

It was a warm, sleepy afternoon, and the scholars in Miss Plummer's school looked as if they wished four o'clock would hurry along.

The class in mental arithmetic were lazily drooping through their lesson when Deacon Day popped his cheery face in at the door. All the children loved him, and were glad when he came to visit the school.

Perhaps he saw they needed something to wake them up, so when the class was through with the lesson he gave them the problem:

"Fifteen cows were going through a narrow gate, when only one could pass at a time, which cow could look back and say, 'There are eleven pairs of horns behind me?'"

The class thought busily for a moment; then up came Tommy Tuit's hand.

"Which one, Tommy?" asked the Deacon.

"The seventh."

"No."

Another minute of study; then Celia Brown put up her hand.

"What do you think, Celia?"

"I think it might be the eighth, for when the cow turned her head to look back her own horns would be behind her, wouldn't they?"

"No; it isn't the eighth," said the Deacon.

About this time little Johnny Harrison, on the front seat, began to snicker.

"What are you laughing at, Johnny?" asked Miss Plummer.

"Cows—can't talk!" giggled little Johnny.

Deacon Day laughed, too, then, "Johnny has answered it," he said. "None of the cows could do it, of course."

Then all the scholars laughed and rose up for the rest of the day and Deacon Day bowed himself out.

Rebuted by a Baby King.

Here is an old story in a new dress. It is told by a Paris writer for the Philadelphia Telegraph.

There come from Spain the most cheering accounts of the health of the child sovereign Alfonso, XIII. He is growing fast, is once more strong and lively, and in fact, gives no end of trouble to his mother and government by his exuberant spirit and head-over-heels ways. Just now he is enjoying the baths and breezes of the lovely seaside resort of Concha, and whenever his small majesty makes his appearance in front of the royal bath house he is saluted on all sides with cries of "Long live the King!"

A comical story is told concerning his behavior in church. He has been often reproved for laughing and talking loudly during divine service, and has become quite exemplary on those respects. A few Sundays ago he accompanied his mother to the service at the church at Concha. The priest whose duty it was to preach the sermon was a stalwart and energetic ecclesiastic, and he got excited by his own eloquence, and banished the pulpit cushion and shouted his denunciation of the wicked in a very vehement style. At the first pause there came from the royal pew a little shrill voice, "Look here, man, don't you know it is very wrong to talk out loud in church?"

YOUNG WIFE—"A horrid rat ate one of those lovely canaries my husband got me, and that's why I got a cat." Matriarch—"Well?" Young wife—"And then the cat ate the other."

—Speak this speech, as I tell you trippingly on the tongue." Say that one of the great benefactions of the age is a small bottle of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain. Only 25 cents.

Francis Marion.

Of all the picturesque characters of our Revolutionary period, there is perhaps no one who, in the memory of the people, is so closely associated with romantic adventure as Francis Marion. He belonged to the gallant race of men of whose services France had been formerly deprived when Louis XIV. revoked the edict of Nantes. His father had been a planter near Georgetown, on the coast, and the son while following the same occupation, had been called off to the western frontier by the Cherokee war of 1759 in the course of which he had made himself an adept in woodland strategy. He was now forty seven years old, a man of few words and modest demeanor, small in stature, and slight in frame, delicately organized, but endowed with wonderful nervous energy and sleepless intelligence. Like a woman in quickness of sympathy, he was a knight in courtesy, truthfulness, and courage. The brightness of his face was never sullied by a spot of cruelty. "Never shall a horse be burdened by one of my people," said he: "do distress poor women and children, is what I detest." To distress the enemy in legitimate warfare was on the other hand, a business in which few partisan commanders have excelled him.

For swiftness and secrecy he was unequalled, and the boldness of his exploits seemed almost incredible, when compared with his resources. His force sometimes consisted of less than twelve men and seldom exceeded seventy. To arm them, he was obliged to take the saws from sawmills and have them wrought into rude swords at the country forge, while powder mugs and spoons were cast into bullets. With such equipment he would attack and overwhelm parties of more than two hundred Tories; or he would even swoop upon a column of British regulars on their march, throw them into disorder, set free their prisoners, slay and disarm a score or two, and plunge out of sight in the darkling forest as swiftly and mysteriously as he had come.—September Atlantic.

Fastidious Burglars.

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Nov. 11.—No little amount of talk was indulged in on the streets yesterday, when the report of another robbery was circulated. Since the burning of Pringle's building at Humlock's Creek by thieves, to wipe out all traces of their work, a number of business men have been in the habit of sleeping, with creaked revolvers in their stores. Despite the precautionary measures taken by the more wary, raids continue to be made nightly. The situation is certainly growing desperate, and if some action is not soon taken by the authorities the outcome will be serious.

—Juniata City, a few miles from here, was the scene of Sunday night's work. An entrance was effected to the store of Thomas Proctor, and about $800 worth of goods carried away in a wagon.

Not the slightest clue to the identity of the thieves has yet been obtained. That there were two men engaged in Sunday night's job was evidenced by two pairs of old clothes, together with underwear and socks, being found in the store, which were exchanged for new ones.

RINGING NOISES.—In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound is caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

CRANBERRY TARTS.—Make the tart first of fluffy pie crust, cutting them into shape with a cake-cutter, laying a strip of the crust around the edge; bake them; then fill with a jelly made by boiling one pint of cranberries in a pint of water until tender; then strain through a jelly-bag; then boil the juice twenty minutes longer; add three parts sugar to four parts of the juice; boil it up once more, then set away to get cold.

FINE HEALTHY SKIN. CURE OF A DISTRESSING SKIN DISEASE GRATEFULLY ACKNOWLEDGED BY A NEW YORK GENTLEMAN.

My little grandson having been cured of an eczema by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, was prevailed upon by my wife and daughters to try it myself for a distressing skin malady that has been the bane of my life for many years.

It required a great deal of persuasion to get me to try it, for I argued that a man seventy years of age could not be cured by such a remedy that a two-year old child was. I was perfectly astonished at the result, however. In one week my eruption nearly disappeared, and in two weeks there was not a vestige of it left. A transformation took place from a leprosy to a fine, healthy skin. My head such an appearance that I avoided society, but now, thanks to the CUTICURA REMEDIES, I can once more go out with comfort and enjoy all the pleasure of society with a satisfaction I was long a stranger to.
