Medical.

CATARH

is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength. All who suffer from catarrh or debility should certainly give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial.

A PERFECT CURE.

"I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for the past four years at intervals. I was troubled with catarrh, and the medicine effected a perfect cure. I take it now whenever I feel debilitated, and it always gives me immediate strength, regulates the bowels and gives an excellent appetite." LEVI CAMPBELL, Parkersburg, W. Va.

GOOD RESULTS.

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh for a good many years. I tried nearly everything I heard of, and also many different physicians, with little or no benefit, until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I am now using with good results. I can recommend it heartily to all, being confident that it is a good medicine." MRS. A. R. DENHAM, Omaha, Neb.

Thrilling Escape of the Utery Family from the Redskins.

A correspondent writes as follows to the Ligonier Echo: This is no fancy sketch but facts. Although it has never found its way into the history of our country, I have it from one of the party of this thrilling incident. One beautiful day in July, 1775, Mr. Utery, the great grandfather of Mrs. Isaac Schlater, on his farm 2 miles south of the borough of Ligonier, was grinding his scythe in front of his log cabin. He saw six Indians coming through the woods in front of the house, when he ran into the house and blockaded the door with firewood. The Indians tried to force the door open but failed. Mr. Utery had a rifle in the house and shot several bullets through the door at the Indians, and they fired several bullets through the door at those in the house. Two of his daughters, one the grandfather-mother of Mr. Isaac Schlater, and her sister, 12 and 14 years respectively, were out in the woods, and on hearing the reports of the firing at the house ran toward the house, and on seeing the Indians at the house ran back into the woods and secreted themselves as best they could. The Indians had seen them. Mr. Utery had a large tin dinner horn in the house, and he sounded the alarm with it and frightened the Indians who started pursuit of the girls and captured one of them; the other who I heard narrate the case some 50 years after, was hid in a tree top and they did not find her. The one they captured was taken a prisoner. They fled, and on hearing of the case some eight or ten went out from Ft. Ligonier and followed the trail of the Indians, and about one mile from the house found the young lady the Indians had captured, lying on the ground bleeding minus her scalp. They took her home, she recovered and lived some 25 years after, but there was always a running sore on the top of her head. These are some of the trials our forefathers had to pass through. The original door with the firewood in it is still in the possession of Mr. Isaac Schlater, 2 miles from Ligonier, to be seen by anyone wishing to see it.

Only One Chinaman in the Late War.

E. D. Cahota visited Libby Prison War Museum a few days ago and inspected the curious relics of the war. Mr. Cahota is a native born Chinaman. He has lived in this country nearly forty years, having left the land of his birth when only six years old. Long before the Chinese Exclusion law was dreamt of he had proved his fitness for the duties of American citizenship by taking up arms in defence of his adopted country and marching to the front. Although but fifteen years old when the war broke out, he declared that he was overage and enlisted in the Twenty-third Massachusetts Volunteer, under command of Colonel Andrew Ellwood—the only representative of the Mongolian race among the millions of men thus facing each other in a struggle for life and death.

Tackled the Wrong Cows.

Passengers who were waiting for a New Jersey Central Railroad train at the Perth Amboy depot on Thursday saw two cows in a field opposite the depot get the better of a large shepherd dog in a fight that the dog started. Of the dozen cows in the field one strayed away from the herd and stood near the fence along the railroad track. The dog ran up the bank and barked in her face until she turned and ran. The dog followed, snapping at her heels, and she stopped suddenly, and turning on the dog, tried to hook him. The dog dodged, and then jumped and caught her by the ear. The cow shook him loose and again tried to hook him, but the dog got another grip on the ear. The fight was continued for five minutes, and the rest of the herd watched it, switching their tails and moving their ears back and forth.

The Chatelaine Watch.

The chatelaine watch is again coming into favor for ladies use. It is a dainty time piece and one will not wonder at it that indications show that it will be extensively worn this season. Style in ladies watches changes just as the forms of their dresses are revolutionized. During the coming winter one will frequently hear the clanking of the chatelaine as a lady passes, which feebly suggests the presence of the military. Bailey, Banks & Biddle, of Philadelphia, say that in anticipation of this becoming the popular style they have given large orders for chatelaines and have just received the first of the invoices.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

How Indigo is Grown.

That portion of the Nicaragua which stretches to the northeast from the shores of Lake Managua is known as one of the best indigo-growing districts of the world. The climate is cooler than that of the plain of Leon, and continues growing so, as one gradually ascends the grade until he finds himself on the plateau of Segovia, where the days are always pleasant, and the night a cold enough for fires.

But a few leagues from Leon, on every side of the trail and as far as the eye can reach, a rich green undergrowth covers every cleared space, which most resembles the tender sprouts of the honest tree, and is what the natives call "ajiquilite," or the indigo plant.

In planting it, the richest soil is carefully cleared and burned over, trenches are dug two or three inches deep and about a foot apart, into which the seed is thrown and highly covered with earth. The planting is done in May, at the close of the dry season, and the shrub is ready to be cut in August.

The young bushes have to be carefully weeded to prevent any other plants from springing up and mixing with them, which would injure the quality of the indigo. About the middle of August the leaves present a rough surface and appear as if covered with a green scum, when the stalks is cut off by the gatherers a few inches above the ground, leaving a few sprouts remaining, which produce a second crop that is gathered about two months later.

The first year's result is usually small, that of the second year is much greater, and the third year's is immense, after which the crop diminishes again until the seventh year, when the fields have again to be cleared and planted.

The cut plants are tied in bundles, like wheat in the United States, and carried to the fermentation vat, where enough water is allowed to run in to cover it; then the bundles are weighed down to steep and ferment.

The only skill required in the manufacture is to be able to check the fermentation at the proper moment, and natives competent to do so receive from five to ten dollars per day. When the solution of indigo has a peculiar green color, it is drawn off into another vat, where it is necessarily agitated and beaten by revolving fans until it changes from its original green color to a dark blue, and the coloring matter commences to precipitate.

The water is then drawn off, leaving a granulated soft blue clay, which is drained in bags, then dried in the sun, carefully selected as to quantity, and packed for export in packages of one hundred and fifty pounds each, or "ceroons."

Forty or fifty years ago Nicaragua produced from nine thousand to ten thousand "ceroons" of indigo per annum, but now it may be doubted if the total annual product exceeds two thousand.

Most of the fine "haciendas" of the high country are now commencing to graze cattle, and, though many still remain where labor is cheap, the indigo farms are gradually disappearing, and cattle, coffee and cacao fields are taking their place.

Jay Gould's Great Wealth.

There is not a man in America or the world at large who absolutely owns and controls and has registered in his own name as many stocks as Mr. Jay Gould. It is no exaggeration to say that he draws more revenue from his invested capital than does any other living soul. In order that some idea may be had of his wealth, it is simply necessary to take three of his stocks: Manhattan, of which he owns and has registered $10,000,000, Missouri Pacific $12,500,000, and western Union $25,000,000. Of these three, independent of his vast number of bonds and other dividend paying securities, he draws for dividends over $2,000,000 a year. His income from other sources, of course, amounts to four or five times as much. It will be readily seen that he cannot commence to use for his own personal uses even a small part of the interest which the divided money alone would yield. He must invest it, and he does invest it. It is safe to say that he takes the money as the dividend periods come around and buys other securities. His holdings show that he is bullish upon the properties with which his name is identified, because he owns not less than a quarter interest in cash, and in some a half interest. These facts are not known, of course, to the world.
