The Boy Who Did His Best. He is doing his best, that boy of sixteen, stretched out before a bright fire in the old tanning shed. Reclining up-on an old sheepskin with book in hand, he is acquiring knowledge as truly as any student at his desk in some favored institution, with all the conveniences into holes. Then the cat seemed to think it was time for her to do somethis best, tho—this same boy, Claude—as thing, but she was too late. The com-The helps his master prepare the sheep and lambs' skins for dyeing, so that they can be made into leather. He is doing his best by obedience and by respectful conduct to his master, endeavoring to do his work well, although he often makes mistakes, as his work is not so well suited to his tastes as the study

For Claude's wits were "wool gatherthey are all irritating, do not thorough ing" sure enough; but he was not sort- ly reach the affected surfaces and should ing the wool aright.

And he quickly sets to work to repair

"We must get all the skins under covor," said Gaspard to his apprentice, "a Louis E. Atkinson, of the Eighteenth storm is at hand."

The task was finished and the tanner The task was finished and the tanner was about to return to his cot and Claude to his shed, when the boy extended the army as a surgeon and served through the war. He was one of the plaimed: "Surely I heard a cry. Some one is trying to cross the ford.'

And in an instant he darted toward the river, followed by his master carrying the lantern, Some villagers were already there, and a strong rope was tied around the waist of the brave boy who was about to plunge into the stream, for a man upon horseback was seen coming down the river, both the rider and horse much exhausted. Claude succeeded in grasping the rein, and the strong hands of the master that held the rope drew him to shore, and all were saved. had acquired. A tew months later, instead of the old tanning shed as a study, Claude might be seen with his books in a handsome mansion at Paris, the house of M de Wallis, whose life he had saved, and who had become his friend and benefactor. The boy felt that he had done his duty and that he was receiving much in return, and he determined to make every effort to meet the expectations of his patron.

He succeeded. Claude Capperonier, the boy who did his best, became the most distinguished Greek and Latin scholar of his time. At the age of twenty-five he filled the chair of Greek Professor in the Royal College of Paris. More than this, he became a man who feared God and was much beloved for his goodness and amiable qualities. He never forgot his former master and wife. Their old age was cheered by many tokens of remembrance in the form of substantial gifts from the man who, when a boy, studied so diligently by the fire of their old shed, but who "would never make a tanner."

Dust in the Air.

It is curious to note the source whence the dust of the day is derived. Somewhere about 1828, Ehrenberg, the German naturalist, who interested himself deeply in the history of animalcular life, undertook the examination of the air of Berlin. Some of his misroscopic researches in that direction yielded extraordinary results. In the air of the German capital he was able to detect organ Asms or living specks which were proper to Africa, and the atmosphere of Portugal revealed traces of animalcular life mon to the prairies of North America. It is not to be wondered at that the air dust, whatever its nature, should be transported for immense distances by the winds, or that the dried and desiccated forms of animalculæ should be conveyed from one continent to another as mere specks, unseen save by the eyes of science. - Chicago Herald.

No CURE, No PAY -Is the motto of the reliable firm which manufactures Hasson's Compound Syrup of Tar. This valuable medicine is a certain cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, etc., and its merit is guaranteed. In other words, its makers say, "Try a bottle of our medicine and if it does not give you substantial relief you can go to your druggist and get your money back." In these days of humbugs such honesty as this is decidedly refreshing. For sale by C. M. Parrish, Bellefonte.

Three Rats in a Pugilistic Encounter.

A merchant in Binghamton, N. Y. aw a strange combat not long ago. He leard a squeaking noise under one of his shelves, and a moment later there rolled out three gray rats in a pugilistic encounter. They clawed and bit at each other savagely, and were so much absorbed in the fight that they paid no attention to the lookers-on. A cat walked leisurely up and also stood by, watching the row. After a few minutes the rodents realized their position, broke away and scampered off

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because be abandoned as worse than failures. "Aye, aye, sir," replied the appren-tice, "but I will fix them all right." A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

TO THE HUNGRY PUBLIC.

It is only those who eat-the many who relife, to prolong their exstence, that we address.

Those who use nothing,-who think they need nothing,-who live on expectation, hope or some intangible nothing, will save time by passing this column by. It is not intended for them but the other fellows. We write what is here put down for the people who are mortal enough to get hungry, and in consequence of getting hungry are sensible enough to try to get what is good, pure, wholesome and necessary, at prices that do t require them to lay out al: that they earn, to appeare their appetites. We have oeen in the hunger appeasing business for many, many years. We know what women and children desire, and we know how much better and how much more pleasant it is to reside in a community where people enjoy good health, than among dyspeptic complainers, growlers and sufferers. To have healthy people pure food must be used. We understand this, and understanding it, keep nothing but the purest of everything that can b found in the market. To satisfy the demands of the
