Medical.

CAUSES OF SCROFULA.

First of all, Scrofula is inherited. The large majority of people suffer more or less from impure blood given them by their parents. Second, Scrofula may be acquired by trying to live on insufficient and poorly-cooked food, which fails to supply the blood with enough of the elements of life and health. Third, confinement in poorly ventilated rooms, workshops or factories, or living in damp, unhealthy localities, will poison the blood and develop Scrofula.

FOR ALL CASES

Of Scrofula, whether inherited or acquired, and in whatever form, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine known. It thoroughly expels every trace of impurity, cures the blood, restores health and vitality, cures all the various elements of health and vitality which it carries, and helps the liver and kidneys, the great excretors of the system, to perform their natural duties.

KING OF MEDICINES

Is what Wm. A. Lohr of Kendallville, Ind., calls Hood's Sarsaparilla, and with good reason, S. rofula, in the form of white swellings and a res confined him to his bed for 7 years and kept him an invalid for 11 long years. His sufferings were intense, he feared he never should get well. But he read of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try this medicine. He was soon gratified to see the sores decay, and to make a long story short, as the result of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, faithfully he has been entirely cured of scrofula and enjoys good health.

Largest Market Garden.

The Big Crops Raised by a Rhode Island Farmer.

In Rhode Island there is a farm of six hundred acres run as a market garden by Mr. Budlong, an account of whose crops and methods may not be uninteresting. Mr. Budlong employs regularly 170 men all the time. During certain seasons of the year he has two hundred and over extra hands employed as pickers, gathering green corn, cucumbers, peas, tomatoes and other products. He has seventy-two horses and six yoke of oxen. He has his own carpenter, carriage builder, painter and blacksmith, and all his wagons are built by him on the premises. Last winter he sold $39,000 worth of lettuce to one New York dealer, in addition to all his sales to other New Yorkers and to the Boston and Providence markets. He had 150 acres in cucumbers in different lots, and it was a very picturesque scene to notice three gangs of pickers, from forty to fifty men, women and children in a gang, gathering the crop. The white shirts and blue overalls of the men, and the gay colors of the women's attire, dotted among the cucumber vines presented a picture rarely witnessed in New England. The pickers are paid five and six cents a half bushel basket, and some pick as many as twenty-eight baskets in a day. Although Mr. Budlong raises many white spine cucumbers for market, the bulk of his business is in smaller ones for pickling, which is done on his own premises. The cucumbers when picked are placed in large tanks, holding 1,000 bushels. In one room alone we saw twenty-two of these tanks. He has other tanks in other rooms, and is building a new house which will contain twelve more. The cucumbers are carried from the field to the factory by large four-teams, a wagon load driving up every few minutes. In addition to this crop, Mr. Budlong had forty-five acres in green peas, all of which had been gathered and the land seeded to turnips. Sixteen acres were in tomatoes. He had fifty acres in green corn; one day this season he shipped to market 300 barrels, containing eighteen to twenty dozen ears in a barrel, at twenty-five cents per dozen. It was a noticeable thing that the green corn season is about over with him just as the average run of farmers are beginning to get theirs into market. We drove through large fields of great extent of onions, peppers and other crops, to say nothing of the extensive greenhouses and hotbeds. One noticeable thing about the place was a stack of pea vines which had been saved for fodder, much of the coarse stuff about the place being saved for feeding. To raise such immense crops requires a fabulous amount of manure, which is brought from Boston and Providence by train. Mr. Budlong having special side tracks to his grounds from the railroads. He brings manure as far as from Boston contracting there for the supply from 2,200 horses. This business has developed from a small home and country fact here and made being put into the business instead of invested elsewhere. Mr. Budlong is buying land all the time. --New England Farmer.

Value of Oysters for Food.

Speaking roughly, a quart of oysters contains on the average about the same quantity of active nutritive substance as a quart of milk, or a pound of very lean beef, or a pound and a half of fresh cod fish, or two thirds of a pound of bread. But while the weight of actual nutriment in the different qualities of food named is very nearly the same, the quality is widely different. That of the lean meat or cod fish consists mostly of what are called in chemical language protein compounds, or "fish formers"; the substance which makes blood, muscle, tendon, bone, brain and other nutritive tissues. That of the bread contains but little of these, and consists chiefly of starch, with a little fat and other compounds which serve the body as fuel, and supply it with heat and muscular power. The nutritive substance of oysters contains considerable of both the flesh forming and the especially heat and force giving ingredients. Oysters come nearer to milk than almost any other common food; they are valuable for supplying the body with material to build up its parts, repair its wastes and furnish it with heat and energy, would be pretty nearly the same.

Why Two Ears Are Necessary.

Sound travels by waves radiating from a central point of disturbance, just as waves radiate when a stone is dropped into still water. So far as the hearing of each individual is concerned these waves move in a direct line from the cause of the sound to his ear, the impact being greatest in the ear that is nearest the source. This being the case a person who has totally lost the sense of hearing in one ear, though he may imagine that the defect is of but little consequence, can not locate the direction of a sound to save his life, even when the center of disturbance is quite close to him. Blind persons learn to estimate distances in a surprisingly brief period after losing their sight, but experts on diseases of the ear say that persons who lose in one ear can never learn to estimate the direction of a sound.

Sam Jones as a Peacemaker.

A good story is told on the Rev. Sam Jones, an incident that happened when the well-known preacher first started in evangelistic work, says the Atlanta Journal. He went to a small town and made being put into the business instead of invested elsewhere. Mr. Budlong is buying land all the time. --New England Farmer.

Have Good Table Ware.

It is difficult to find a good teakettle in any shape with thick, pure tin lining and no copper visible. The old iron teakettle is vastly safer than one with a copper bottom and the agate or white enamelled ware is far better than inferior tin. Fireproof stoneware is better for most cooking than metal of any kind. It was a safe sanitary measure, unknown as such, that led families a generation past to insist on solid silver for good housekeeping. The cheap, worn plate seen on most tables is no less dangerous than the bad tin fruit can, while plated castor bottle menaces life. I learned this in taking off the screw top of one of those pretty plated castor stands which abound in fancy stores. It had been filled with salt for some weeks in daily use, and the inside of the top was a collection of green salt covered with veridigris and iron metal. No wonder persons using it had been troubled with systems of gastritis. Whatever you go without in the way of art furnishing you value health, have at least solid silver teaspoons to go round, pure silver castor tops, whether you can afford a stand or not, and silver salt spoons and butter knife. Don't trust plated ware a day after the plate is worn. It is not safe to use for sensitive stomachs, and those which are not sensitive to begin will become so by its use.

A Winged Lizard.

One of the strangest of the many strange creatures that inhabit the wilds of Southern Asia and India is the "flying lizard," a small, brilliant hued lizard of the order Bracovola. On the wing bracovola resembles a richly tinted insect; when at rest it compares favorably with others of the lizard tribe, with the exception that it has an extraordinary prouberance on both sides of the body. These are the wings, which are formed by a cutaneous flap, wing-like in shape, supported by a series of false ribs. In color these flying lizards, are blue and gray, with intermediate tints of various kinds and shades. The tail is long, slender and very snaky in appearance. A large double pouch extending below the head adds to the ferocious aspect of the little rainbow colored brute. The wings are not true wings, strictly so called, but are used merely as parachutes. When the lizard leaps from the limb of a tree into the air the upper current brings them out, and enables the possessor to soar away at an angle to a greater or lesser distance, according to the height of the starting point. The lizard can change its direction while in the air, a power not possessed by our "flying squirrels." Hence the casual observer might readily believe that they had the power of moving the winglike appendages, which would, in that case, be true flight. Sailing is, however, the limit of their power, the height of the starting point regulating the distance traveled in the soaring flight, which is quite frequently several hundred yards, an aerial exhibition which strikes terror to the heart of a stranger wandering for the first time in the jungles of the antipodean wilds. --St Louis Republic.
