

How Central American Presidents Get Rich.

"No one who has not lived in Central America has any idea of the fortunes which the presidents of those petty republics amass in a few years," says a Guatemalan merchant. "You see, these fellows are complete dictators as Napoleon was in his best days. They handle the public purse, and can lay out what they want, and cover into their own exchequer a very large amount, which is put down on the books for public improvements and secret service work. There is no question that Barrios, who hadn't a dollar when he secured the control of Guatemala, was worth when he was killed at least ten millions. About half of this was invested in New York property and in American government bonds, so the widow was all right. His Guatemala property, however, was seized by Barillas, his successor, under one pretext or another. Barrios was an open handed dictator, who never minced words or concealed the fact that he would promptly remove any one who aspired to oppose him. Barillas was equally cruel, but he always masks his work under devious forms of law. He has stripped the country of large sums, and it is said he has several millions to his credit in the Bank of England, so that should he be suddenly unseated by a popular revolution, he would have a competence for the remainder of his days. Barillas has also just played a shrewd game of mortgage on his valuable coffee plantation to a rich German syndicate for over two millions. With this mortgage on the property, should he be driven into exile his estates cannot be confiscated, as the German minister would at once demand protection for the interests of the mortgagees. Barillas has also sold the coffee crop on his estates for three years, realizing the snug sum of $1,000,000 for it. Taking these two things together, it looks very much as though he fears defeat in the struggle with Salvador next summer, and that he is raising all the money he can to be prepared for flight. The legend of Damocles' sword is literally true of Central American presidents.

Bravely Bolted the Caterpillar.

A veteran who had been through half a dozen campaigns and was very particular about what he ate, was invited out to a grand dinner party. He sat almost directly opposite the hostess, and was painfully conscious that every move he made could be observed by her. Suddenly, at the height of the festivities the veteran came across a caterpillar in his salad. A furtive glance at the hostess disclosed the fact that she, too, had discovered the embarrassing circumstance. It was a critical moment, but the old soldier was equal to the occasion. Without changing a muscle he gathered up the caterpillar with a forkful of salad and swallowed both. The look of gratitude which he received from his hostess a few minutes later warmed his heart. In due time the story leaked out, and when somebody asked the old campaigner how he liked caterpillar salad the reply came like red-hot shot: "Do you take me for a man who would spoil a dinner party for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

What a Thistle Did.

A Scotchman living in Australia and visiting his native land carried back a thistle, the emblem of Scotland, as the reader is doubtless aware. A grand banquet was held at Melbourne by 200 Scotchmen, and the thistle, in a huge vase, occupied the place of honor in the centre of the table. It was toasted and cheered and the next day it was planted in the public garden with a great deal of rejoicing. The thistle grew and thrived, and in due time its down was scattered by the winds; other thistles sprang from the seed, and their down was scattered and in a few years the thistle had made itself thoroughly at home in all parts of Australia. It has rooted out the native grasses on thousands of acres, and I could almost say millions of acres of pasture land, destroyed sheep runs by the hundred and caused general excretion of the Scotchman who took so much pains to import the original. In a similar manner the watercress, the English sparrow, the common sweetbrier and other exotics, have proved very troublesome and caused immense losses.

A writer in the New York Tribune thus transforms potatoes into "potatoes a la maitre d'hotel." Cut boiled potatoes into slices, fry them in hot lard, put them into a stewpan with some fresh butter, chopped parsley, salt, pepper and a few squeezes of lemon juice. Let the whole get hot, and leave it on the fire until well commingled; then add a very little hot cream and serve. This latter is Alexander Dumas' recipe, which warrants its excellence. You can also do the way I learned in Switzerland for "potatoes with cheese." Slice some cold potatoes rather thin. Put them in layers into a buttered dish, alternately with layers of thinly sliced cheese, finishing off with the latter. Put small pieces of butter on top. Bake in a slow oven until a light brown. The cheese underneath ought to be no more than just dissolved.

Chocolate cookies are made in this way: Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, and stir gently into them the following ingredients, which have been mixed by sitting: two ounces grated chocolate, four ounces powdered sugar, one ounce of flour. Drop the mixture by the teaspoonful on buttered pans of paper, and bake slowly for about twenty minutes in a rather cool oven. Sift with powdered sugar while warm.

Ammonia and its Uses.

A little ammonia in tepid water will soften and cleanse the skin. Spirits of ammonia will often relieve a severe headache. Door plates should be cleansed by rubbing with a cloth wet in ammonia and water.

If the color has been taken out of silks by fruit stains ammonia will usually restore the color. To brighten carpets wipe them with warm water in which has been poured a few drops of ammonia.

One or two tablespoonfuls of ammonia added to a pail of water will clean windows better than soap. A few drops in a cupful of warm water, applied carefully, will remove spots from paintings and chromos.

Grease spots may be taken out with weak ammonia in water; lay soft white paper over and iron with a hot iron.

When acid of any kind gets on clothing spirits of ammonia will kill it. Apply colorfastness to restore color.

Keep nickel, silver ornaments and mounts bright by rubbing with woolen cloth saturated with spirits of ammonia.

Old brass may be cleaned to look like new by pouring strong ammonia on it and scrubbing with a scrub brush; rinse in clear water.

A tablespoonful of ammonia in a gallon of warm water will often restore color in carpets; it will also remove whitewash from left.

Yellow stains left by sewing machine oil, on white, may be removed by rubbing the spot with a cloth wet with ammonia before washing with soap.

Equal parts of ammonia and turpentine will take paint out of clothing, even if it be hard and dry. Saturate the spot as often as necessary and wash out in soap suds.

Put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a quart of water, wash your brushes and combs in this, and all grease and dirt will disappear. Rinse, shake and dry in the sun or by the fire.

If those who perspire freely would use a little ammonia in the water they bathe in every day it would keep their flesh clean and sweet, doing away with any disagreeable odor.

Flannel and blankets may be soaked in a pail of water containing one tablespoonful of ammonia and a little soda. Rub as little as possible and they will be white and clean and will not shrink.

One teaspoonful of ammonia to a teacupful of water will clean gold or silver jewelry; a few drops of clear ammonia rubbed on the underside of diamonds will clean them immediately, making them very brilliant.

Bad for the Eyes. "Speaking of thieves," said an old detective the other day, "reminds me of cayenne pepper. The two will always be associated in my mind together."

"Get a dose?" was asked. "I did; and if there is anything else like it on earth, I don't know the name of it."

"Relate." "It was in Toronto, and a good many years ago. I had gone there after a thief named Billy Miles, who robbed the till of a store on Jefferson avenue. I went there to locate and have him arrested, and I found him at the door of a saloon. He was as pleasant as peaches, offered to come over without papers, and asked me to take a drink. It was so pleasant that I had no suspicions of the dose in store for me. I entered, walked to the bar, and I was just drinking a glass of ale, when—whiff! whew! (Halifax!)"

"Peppered you, eh?" "A handful of cayenne right in my face and eyes, and I don't believe the man who is burned at the stake can suffer more than I did. I fainted away from the pain, and it was eight days before I could see daylight. My eyes have never been right since, nor will they ever be."

"And you never got even?" "Well, yes. It wasn't six weeks after that when Billy was lost with a crane on Saginaw Bay, and his body came ashore floated with a life-preserver. They said he must have laid at least twenty-four hours in the water, but his death was painless compared with the dose he gave me."

How to Be a Happy Old Maid. To have so much to do that there is no time for morbid thought. To never think for a moment that you are not attractive, and to make yourself look as attractive as possible. To be so considerate of the happiness of others that it will be reflected back to you as from a looking-glass.

To never permit yourself to grow old, for by cultivating all the graces of heart, brain and body, age will not come upon you. To believe that a life-work has been mapped out for you, that it is near you, and to do that which your hands find for you.

To remember that the happy old maid is the one member of a family who, not having any other claims on her, can be God's own sunshine to those in sorrow or in joy.

Try this recipe for domestic macaroni: Beat two eggs and a pinch of salt in as much flour as will make a stiff paste. Roll very thin, sprinkle well with flour, then roll up as you would jelly cake, and begin at one end cutting into small strips about the size of a straw. Put the strips lightly into a pan of boiling water and let them boil a few minutes until they swell. Take them out, and to each layer of the macaroni add cheese, pepper, butter and a little salt, and some of the water in which it was boiled, until the pan is filled. Bake brown on top.

"Mrs. Greyneck—"Now, just see what you have done. I told you to watch those rubbers and when they were dry to take them away from the fire, and here they are, burned to a perfect crisp." Mr. Greyneck—"I want to know? Can't you smell anything? I smell them a block down the street." Mr. Greyneck—"O, yes; I smell them, but I thought Dudgeh up-stairs was smoking a cigarette."

Skimming Hides Without a Knife.

"Lute" knows as much about skinning hides as any man between Hunter's Point and Sag Harbor. But he is not proud and admits that there was a time when he did not know so much about this slippery product of the Sarc.

"It cost me the cigars for a big crowd once," said he "to learn how to skin an eel without using a knife. I didn't believe it could be done and there don't nobody until they see it for themselves."

I confessed that the skinning of an eel without a knife would be an exploit sufficient to excite my admiration.

"Well, now, just watch," Lute dropped the eel he held on the ground, put his large and robust boot upon its tail and rolled it rapidly back and forth. The tail did not smash, as one would think, but after being rolled a dozen times or so the skin split in two seams along the sides. He took an end in each hand and pulled them apart. The skin peeled off easily in two sections.

"That's wrong end first, as most folks skin eel," said Lute, "but it's just as good a job."—New York Herald.

To boil asparagus, shave off the hard outside, and cut away the woody lower part, rinse in cold water, then in lemon and put them into plenty of boiling water, slightly salted. They ought to be done in twenty minutes. They get hard if let boil too long, and moreover, would lose their flavor, together with their delicate mineral matters, which render them so valuable. Remove the string after they are placed on the dish they are to be served in. Have with them some melted butter, or a Bechamel sauce made slightly acid and thickened with the yolk of one or more eggs.

Blonde hair is improved by being crimped a little in the back; in fact any except black hair looks better when it is a little roughened. Nowadays the wearing of false hair barely is tolerated, and women with but little of their own hair arrange what they have to the best advantage. Of course a blonde can give the effect of having a great deal because she can make it fluffy on pins. If she is wise she will not use a crimping iron; instead she will put it up on pins, pinching it with a hot iron, being careful, however, to have tissue paper between the iron and the hair itself.

Mrs. Greyneck—"Now, just see what you have done. I told you to watch those rubbers and when they were dry to take them away from the fire, and here they are, burned to a perfect crisp." Mr. Greyneck—"I want to know? Can't you smell anything? I smell them a block down the street." Mr. Greyneck—"O, yes; I smell them, but I thought Dudgeh up-stairs was smoking a cigarette."

Saddlery.

SCHOFIELD'S NEW HARNESS HOUSE. We extend a most cordial invitation to our patrons and the public, in general, to witness one of the GRANDEST DISPLAYS OF Light and Heavy Harness ever put on the Bellefonte market, which will be made in the large room, formerly occupied by Harper Bros., on Spring Street. It has been added to my factory and will be used exclusively for the sale of harness, being the first exclusive salesroom ever used in this town, and heretofore the custom has been to sell goods in the room in which they were made. This elegant room has been refitted and furnished with glass cases in which the harness can be nicely displayed and still kept away from heat and dust, the necessity of long wear in leather. Our factory now occupies a room 10x17 feet and the store 26x30 added makes it the largest establishment of its kind outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

We are prepared to offer better bargains in the future than we have done in the past, and we want every one to see our goods and get prices for when you do this, out of self defense you will buy. Our profits are not large, but by selling lots of goods we can afford to live in Bellefonte. We are not indulging in idle philanthropy. It is purely business. We are not making much, but trade is growing and that is what we are interested in now. Profits will take care of themselves.

When other houses discharged their workmen during the winter they were all put to work in my factory, nevertheless the big (3) houses of this city and county would smile if we compared ourselves to them, but we do not mind making much, but trade is growing and that is what we are interested in now. Profits will take care of themselves.

The following are kept constantly on hand. 50 SETS OF LIGHT HARNESS, prices from $3.00 to $15.00 and upwards. LARGE STOCK OF HEAVY HARNESS per season, including all styles of COLLARS from $1.50 to $5.00 each, over $1000 worth of HARNESS OILS and AXLE GREASE, $400 worth of Fly Nets sold cheap from $1.00 to $2.00 each. Horse Brushes, Curly Combs, Sponges, Chamios, RIDING SADDLES, LADY RIDING SADDLES, Harness Soap, Knee Dusters, at low prices. Saddlery-hardware always on hand for sale. Harness Leather as low as 25c per pound. We keep everything to be found in a FIRST CLASS HARNESS STORE—no changing over the years in the same room. No two shops in the same town to catch trade—NO SELLING OUT for the want of trade. Four business-centers at steady work this winter. This is our idea of protection to labor, when other houses discharged their hands, they soon found work with us.
