LOST 6 CHILDREN

BUT SAVED THE SEVENTH.

By the Aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla—Read What Mr. Hubert of Lawrence, Says

"Ten years ago our child was born. Having lost six children we were naturally anxious as to the health of this one. What was our dismay and sorrow to find that she was apparently doomed to the same fate as the others. She seemed to have little strength as a baby, and did not improve as she grew older. When about 2½ years old she began to have dropped wherever she happened to be. At times she would turn black and appear at the point of death. Doctors told us she was in a very bad way from heart trouble.

Nothing that we gave her did any good until in utter desperation, we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She gradually began to improve, the fainting fits became less and less frequent, and finally ceased entirely. Her general health improved, until at the end of a year, having taken seven bottles, we stopped giving it to her. At this time she was 4 years old, and although anxious lest the trouble might return, we ceased to worry, she seemed well. She is now 10 years old and is as a child as you will find anywhere and has never shown any indication of a return of the heart difficulty. During the past 6 years she has taken 3 bottles in all, we only giving it to her irregularly at times when she has complained of feeling tired in the spring and early summer. We feel that we owe a great deal to Hood's Sarsaparilla and cannot say too much in its favor. It has also done me great good for dyspepsia and has cured my wife of sick headache." "It Was Mothers."

HEALTHY AND RUGGED

She was just a little curly-headed school girl who wore one shabby black dress such a long time that the children made fun of her when she came and went among them.

"What do you think?" they said to each other; "that little Louisa has only one dress, and she wears it all the year round."

But that was not true. It was a winter dress, and one day in spring little Louisia blossomed out in pink.

"What do you think?" cried the children; "Louisa's got a new dress."

Children are unfeeling little monsters; naturally. One of them discovered that Louisa's new dress was not new, and she took pains to announce the fact to the school in a few scornful comments.

"Made over!" Yes, indeed, and so old-fashioned! We could see the old stitches. Some one has given it to her."

Louisa heard and cried herself sick. She was doing sams on the blackboard, and thumping knowledge into the children's heads.

"Please, teacher, a girl's fainted."

This unusual announcement aroused all, even the lethargic teacher, into show of interest. The girl was Louisa, she of the pink dress.

"She's been a-cryin' awful," volunteered one of the other children.

When the child came to herself, she clung sobbing to the teacher's unfriendly hand, and told her story.

"Twant' cause it's out of fashion—I didn't care for that; nor 'cause 'twas the only one I've got 'sides the old black but 'twas made over for me from one of my m-mother's and oh-h, teacher, she's dead."

A tear fell from the eye of the teacher, who had traveled that road herself.

"I'm sorry," she said; "I will see that the children treat you differently in future."

And she kept her word.—Detroit Free Press.

A TENDER STORY.—It was a tender-hearted American who saved the murdered Cevera Cisneros from burial in a pauper's grave. When he visited the undertaker's where lay the bodies of murderer and murdered he was perceptibly under the influence of liquor.

"Say, pard," said he to Carl Schussel, "that gal died before she wanted to, didn't she?"

"Yes, sin."

"And that feller there murdered her?"

"It is said."

"And ye'r giving him a big burial?"

"His friends are."

"Ye'r say gal's got to go to the Potter's field?"

"I am afraid so."

"Where's her mother?"

"She has none."

"But she had onc't, and she's got to have a square deal and buried right."

Here's $20 to get her somethin' to wear what's fit to be planted in. Here's $20 to get a better coffin with, and here's $10 for a broken wheel of flowers. Let's not have it said that old Frisco give the murderer a bigger send off than that poor girl what is killed. Good bye, old Fr'd."

"What is your name, please? This is an act of rare generosity."

"Have a drink pard, but my name's my own biz."—San Francisco Report.

A AGE MAKES A DIFFERENCE.—College Avenue has a tot four years of age who but lately passed out of her third year. Meeting her the other day, a young man said:

"My, Bessie, how pretty you're gettin'!"

"Oh, I know it," was the innocent response.

"I thought you didn't like to be called pretty?" he said.

"Well," she said pensively, "that may have been; but then I was free years old."

Musicians of Royal Blood.

A correspondent furnishes the following catalogue of living musicians of royal blood: In England, Queen Victoria and the Princess Louise play the piano forte and organ, the Prince of Wales the banjo and the princess the piano forte; the Duke of Connaught is counted a fine flute player, and the Duke of Edinburgh an accomplished violinist. The favorite instrument of the czar is a silver cornet. The queen of Italy is well known as a clever pianist. The empress of Austria charms by her playing of the flute. The empress of Japan plays the national Japanese instrument—the koto—a zither of large dimensions.

The queen of Roumania is a mistress of the harp and the piano forte. The king of Greece plays with an astonishing virtuosity all possible melodies with castanets and on wine glasses; with a similar cleverness he plays the Hungarian cimbalum, which art is now being learned also by the crown-princess Sophie of Greece, under the instruction of two Hungarian virtuosos. Prince Henry of Prussia is known as a composer for and player on the violin and piano forte on the violin and piano forte. It is clear that their majesties and royal highnesses do not agree at all with Lord Chesterfield, who recommended that model of virtue! to hire his fiddling.

The Dawkins have been married but eight months. They have gotten along miserably together. On Friday, rather than starve at home, Mrs. Dawkins came to visit friends in this city. While here she took the poison.

Investigation led to the arrest of Dawkins. The Coroner's jury has evidence that he was anxious to have his wife carry out her plan of suicide. He is now in jail.

Aided His Wife's Suicide.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 21.—A suicide's accomplice is a raw criminal. Carbonado has one. A Coroner's jury has found that John Dawkins, of that place, abetted his wife in the taking of her life with paris green.
