

Not in It.

Over, will do just as well for a political issue, if it can be squeezed into such, as the determination of a question of importance to our people or interests.

Here in Pennsylvania the State's money is farmed out to banks on a little different basis, but with the same result so far as the people's interests are concerned.

And now that the election is over the Republican Senate will proceed to do that which it has all along contemplated doing: Voting that it has no power to punish thieving or neglect of official duties, and will run away from Harrisburg, without even condemning the system that enabled BARDLEY and his pals to get away with two millions of the people's money.

Well Done Mr. Phelps.

It will be a matter of great gratification to the American people, to know that one of our representatives abroad has made an effort to do something.

The Chilean Trouble—What It Means.

Through the efforts of the administration, its man Mr. EGAN, and the newspapers, we may yet have an opportunity to show to the world that another government and particularly if it happens to be a little one, cannot turn its nose up at us, without being called to account for the insult.

Ever since the result of the elections of 1890, proved the impossibility of making a protective tariff, a successful party issue, the Republicans have been worrying about new questions that would give greater promise of popularity, and have at length struck one it.

From surface indications it appears that Mr. EGAN, the representative of Mr. HARRISON's administration and who, by the way, is a professional agitator, had allied himself with the now defunct BALMACEDA government.

Under the circumstances, the Chilean trouble promises to be a perfect bonanza for Mr. BLAINE and the administration. As to which of these will reap the greater benefit, the future alone can tell.

If the reader will take a map he will find the country, our sixty-five millions of people are expected to "do up," stretched like a shoe string between the Andes and the Pacific ocean, away down along the South American coast, and about two thousand and five hundred miles in length by from eighty to one hundred in width.

We have sixty-five millions of people, Chile has nothing but the courage of its few half clad "peones." What glory would there be in walloping such a people, or brow-beating such a government? And yet the glory that is to come from this affair, from a backing down of the Chilean government or a fight against odds of thirty to one, is to be the Shibboleth, that it is hoped will lead the present administration to victory in 1892.

When the people of this section of the State begin to feel the effects of litigation growing out of difficulties that will occur in consequence of the want of a fence law, they will see the folly of their actions, in refusing to vote for a constitutional convention.

Judge Bucher Detected.

A result of the election which is greatly to be deplored is the defeat of Judge BUCHER for reelection in the Union-Snyder district.

The most surprising thing about the QUAY libel suits is the price he puts upon his character. $100,000 is a rather high figure for a reputation, that any decent man in the State would refuse were it given him for nothing.

There is one thing certain anyway, and that is, that now standing how badly in many people may feel over the result of Tuesday's election.
