Santiago.

The Capital of Chile a Beautiful and Brilliant City.

Santiago, the Chilean capital, according to the fashion prevalent in the days when pirates and buccaners flourished, is situated in the interior of the country, at the foot of the great Cordillera of the Andes, and a distance of four hours, by express train, from its port of Valparaiso.

The plaza of Santiago is of fine proportions and rendered very charming by the shade trees planted round it. The towers are locked in at 10 o'clock every night.

The genuine Chilean is the old Spanish house built around one or more courtyards, and shut off from the street by an open wrought iron gate and by heavy wooden doors that are closed at night.

A LEADER.—Since its first introduction, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor, until now it is clearly in the lead among pure medicinal tonics and alteratives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant, it is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys.

On the plaza you see the rank and file of the army and its officers—the latter in the Spanish type, looking thoroughly military; the former dark-skinned, semi-Indian soldiers, who showed in the late war against Peru that they could fight like demons and kill, plunder and burn with a savage ferocity that few soldiers can equal and none surpass.

The Chilian peones, especially the more intelligent miscellaneous workers known as rotos or ragged men, are truly wonderful creatures for strength and endurance and no European can compete with them.

When they reach the top they just shrug their shoulders, the ore falls on the ground, and they remain a few seconds gasping for breath, and all of a sudden they run down the mine again, whistling as if nothing had happened.

Professor Heilprin's Peary relief party will probably start early in June. About June 15, the professor expects to leave St. John's, N. F., and steer northward along the Greenland coast.

The explosion of a bomb startled all within hearing. So the pains which arise from derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, quickly alarm those who experience them.

BAKED LOBSTER.—Select lobsters, heavy for their size, and see that they are exceedingly lively; as soon as they come from the market cut them into halves with a sharp knife and remove the stomach and intestine; crack the claws, or a half may be partly removed with a can opener or sardine scissors.

The genuine Chilean is the old Spanish house built around one or more courtyards, and shut off from the street by an open wrought iron gate and by heavy wooden doors that are closed at night.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had children, she gave them Castoria.
