Keep up your Fences.

From different parts of the county we have reports of farmers who contemplate allowing their outside fences to go to decay, and of others who are considering the propriety of removing them entirely. This we presume is in consequence of the repeal of the general fence law.

To those who have such purposes in view, we say, don't do it. Outside of the cities and a few counties densely populated and all under cultivation, the people of this state cannot get along without some kind of a fence law, and while it may be several years before another one is enacted, it is just as sure to come, as is the harvest of litigation that will follow the attempted enforcement of the repealing act of 1887. The man who allows his outside fences to go down or removes them entirely, will be put to the expense of building new ones, and will earn for himself the reputation of breeding trouble in his neighborhood and of causing law-suits that would otherwise be avoided.

That it was an inexcusable blunder, to speak in no harsher terms, on the part of the legislature of 1887 to make a sweeping repeal of the fence laws, every reasonable man admits.

Its enforcement, will, in three-fourths of the counties of the state practically blot out the business of cattle raising.

It will pauperize and drive from agricultural pursuits four fifths of the tenant farmers in these counties, whose only profit on their labor consist in the value of the stock they can raise in the woods in the summer.

It will decrease the value of every farm not blessed with running water, and put thousands to the expense of building expensive cisterns to secure water for their necessary farm stock.

It will make of no value at all, hun dreds of thousands of acres of untillable land now used for common pasturage grounds, and by preventing the raising of stock will increase the price of meat to consumers of the state.

It will prevent thousands upon thous. ands of workingmen from keeping a cow and thus add to the want and necessities of many a poor family in every village and township, that is effected that its purposes are higher than his,

Free Silver Prospects In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 30.-There was some quiet consultation among individnal senators on the Democratic side of the chamber to day relative to the notice given by Senator Stewart of his intention to call up the silver bill next Monday. There has been a change in sentiment in the senate on this subject since the last congress, but to what extent it is not possible to determine, as senators do not care to anticipate their action when the bill comes to a vote. effort made to unite the Democrats and each senator will exercise his individual judgment in casting his vote. Senator Vilas to-day said he believed that the bill would not be taken up at all. Senator Stewart will make the motion, which would give him an opportunity to speak upon the subject; but a majority of the senate would in his (Senator Vilas') judgment, vote against the motion.

hing, good road making is a lost art or almost unknown. The ridiculous misapplication of rustic labor and foolishness known as "road working" the gravest farce an ordinary intelligent people ever engaged in year alter. year. It is two well known to need discription, and the fact that it has long been tolerated suggests a doubt as to whether as a people we are not destitute of humor. The spectacle of all It is now stated that there will be no the able bodied men of the "district" turning out under that master of roadmaking farce, the supervisor as he is called, and spending two days each year in making the roads almost impassable for the rest of the year and thus imprisoning themselves in the country during the late autumn and early spring, is one that would delight the heart of Cervantes and perhaps turnished the companion volume to the adventures of the Knights of La Mancha.

A Lost Art.

In the United States, as a general

But the farce goes gravely on year after year. If here and there a city begins to agitate the cause of good roads into the country in the interest of both the country and city residents it is opposed with much the same arguments and obstinacy that good roads were opposed in England a century ago. The fact that it has proved in other countries that good country roads have benefited the country on the whole far more than the cities is a fact country dwellers, as a rule, are ignorant of and apparently cannot understand or appreciate. Railroads can never supply the place of good wagon roads, and the development of a system of good roads in any state will demonstrate that fact so clearly that the example would soon be followed by other states.

-The free silver debate in the House occupied three days, attended at times with warmth. The first vote was taken on Thursday night, on the motion to table the bill, and resulted in a tie-148 to 148. This proved a decided check to the advocates of free silver, who had been boasting of a large majority in the body, Votes were not controlled by party affinity; both sides were divided. The bill, to be again considered, must come up in its order, and may hang for some time. -Ex.
