Exposure of the Methods by Which the McKinley Tariff Law Was Framed.

The Voracious Tax Eaters Fixed it up. Each Protected Interest Dictated His own Particular Bounty. No Heed Paid to Popular Pro

In the recent debate in the house of representatives on the free wool bill Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, delivered a speech in which he laid down before the people of the United States the exact manner in which the McKinley high tariff law of 1890 was framed by the particular interests it was intended to protect. Mr. Dingley of Maine had pronounced the law to be "consistent, comprehensive and complete, with all the different parts properly and just-ly related." Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania had eulogized it as "consistent, logical and complete." Mr. Wilson said that no doubt the gentleman from Maine and Mr. Burrows of Michigan and Mr, Payne of New York had indulged in the pleasant illusion that they were among the chief architects of the Mc-Kinley law. But unfortunately for them there was abundant and unimpeachable evidence to destroy all such claims. Then Mr. Wilson went on to say:

"I turn to the very schedule of the law now under consideration and find that McKinley in presenting to this house the conference report September 27' 1890, said:

"This schedule has the hearty approval of the National Wool Growers' Association, and of the several State associations throughout

"In the next sentence he says; 'And, Mr. Speaker, that is entirely true also of the tobacco schedule, although he omits to say who had approved this latter. As to the great and comprehensive metal schedule, constituting so large a part of the tariff, and contributing so much of its political and pecuniary strength, I read in the report made by Mr. James M. Swank, secretary of the American Iron and Steel Association, made to the president of that association that "During the long period in which this measure (the McKinley bill) received the consideration of congress, the views of this association concerning the proper framing of the metal schedule of the new tariff were frequently solicited and were promptly given?

licited and were promptly given.'
"And as he adds that 'the schedule as adopted is the most harmonious and completely protective of all the metal schedules' in our tariff legislation, we are not left in doubt that the views so 'promptly' given were 'promptly' accep-

"So much for the origin of three important schedules. Let us pursue this investigation a little further. Turning to page 290 of the hearings before the committee of Ways and Means of the last congress, I find that Mr. William Whitman, president of the National Associa-tion of Wool Manufacturers, said he 'had framed two clauses' prescribing the taxes on women's and children's dress goods, and these clauses turn up as Mr. Whitman framed them as sections 374 and 375 of the McKinley act, with a blank in the provisos filled, doubtless according to the same gentleman's sugges-

"At page 281 of the hearings Mr. Isaac N. Heidelberger, in behalf of the wholesale clothier manufacturers, submitted a memorandum of their demands, and that memorandum, so far as it related to woolen clothing, is substantially embodied in paragraph 396 of the act.

"The makers of firearms appeared at page 1255 with the sections they wished incorporated and made a part of the tariff schedule of duties, and those sections appeared in their own words as paragraph 169 and 170 of the act, with a single trifling change.

"Again at page 92 of the hearings may be found the demands of the tin plate makers—that were going to be—proffered by the trusted counselor of my friend from Michigan [Mr. Burrows]. and although thousands and tens of thousands of consumers and laborers protested against these demands, Mr. Cronemeyer's wishes are exactly embodied in paragraph 143 of the McKinley bill. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

"At page 79 of these hearings Mr. Charles S. Landers, representing the makers of table cutlery, presented the corrections and amendments which they wished to the senate clause, and at paragraph 167 of the act his memorandum appears in the very words in which he wrote it.

"On page 65 of the hearings Mr. W. F. Rockwell makes known the demands of pocket cutlery, and these demands literally reappear in paragraph 165 of the bill. Now I understand for the first time in my life how a 'consistent, logical, complete' protective tariff is framed, 'with the different parts properly and justly related.' [Renewed applause.] Our friends upon the other side merely leave the blanks on the committee table and look at the ceiling or stroll around the capitol while the parties who desire to tax the people come and fill in the blanks according to suggestions of their own greed or selfishness "And that is the method of constructing a 'comprehensive and logical bill.' How much trouble my friend from Indiana (Mr. Holman) could avoid if, instead of toiling over his appropriation bills, he would only put the blanks on his committee table and invite the government officers to come and write in the salaries they desire to receive. [Laughter.] Yet it is just as right, just as safe and proper, just as defensible to make up an appropriation by allowing parties to write in their own salaries as it is to make up a tariff bill by allowing parties to write in their own bounties. [Applause.]

is a Stepmother-Have You Ever seen the Family ?—And the Old Man?

A pretty fable of the pansy is current among the children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most pansies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the petals are plain in color and three are gay. The two plain petals have a single sepal, two of the gay petals have a sepal each, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals. The fable is that the pansy represents a family, consisting of husband, and four daughters, two of the latter being stepchildren of the wife. The plain petals are the stepchildren, with only one chair; the two small gay petals are the daughters with a chair and the large gay petal is the wife, with two chairs. To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and pistils are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an old man with a fiannel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised and his feet in a bath tub. The story is probably of French origin, because the French call the pansy the stepmother.
