A Hot Weather Vegetable.

The possibilities of the cucumber, except for pickling, or salads, are little understood. It is excellent in soup, as well as fried, stewed, stuffed and many other ways.
Cucumber soup—Cut one large, or two medium-sized cucumbers into thin slices, strew salt over them, and place between two plates to drain. Put them into a saucepan, with a quart and half a pint of some white stock, either chicken or veal, and simmer gently, without reducing the quantity, for forty minutes. Season with salt and a little cayenne; thicken with ground rice, or arrowroot, wet with milk, and as soon as it has boiled up, draw to the side of the fire, add half a pint of hot milk and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Serve at once. The safest way to add eggs to any hot liquid is to turn a little of the latter slowly into the bowl containing the yolks, beating the while. When the bowl is full, turn it all into the vessel containing the rest, still beating, and when thoroughly hot pour into the tureen.
Stuffed Cucumbers.—There are several ways of preparing these. Peel two large ones, and with a sharp knife cut out a neat piece from the side. With a small teaspoon remove the seeds and fill with nice force meat of any kind; replace the pieces and tie securely with stout white thread. Line the bottom of sauce pan with thin slices of bacon and veal, lay on the cucumbers, then another layer of bacon and veal, three new carrots, which should be scraped; three small onions, and as many turnips. cover with stock or water, and simmer until all are tender. Thicken the gravy and pour it around the meat and vegetables after they are nearly done. Season, when half done, with salt and pepper. Another way is to cut them in halves, take out the seeds, and fill with a force-meat made of equal parts of bread crumbs and chopped marrow, well seasoned with pepper and salt. Tie the halves together, lay on a baking dish, nearly cover with meat gravy and bake until tender. A good substitute for meat gravy is brown drawn butter.
Cucumber Stew.—Peel and cut into quarters lengthwise, dredge with flour, season and fry lightly in hot butter, put them in a saucepan with some good brown gravy, and stew slowly until tender. Add a least trifle of sugar and a teaspoonful of vinegar to the sauce; thicken slightly, and pour around the cucumbers. Sometimes an equal number of small button onions are stewed with quarters of the cucumbers.

Great Relay Bicycle Race.
From Chicago to New York in One Hundred Hours.
All over the country great interest has been aroused among military men, roads improvement agitators and riders of the bicycle, in the great relay bicycle race between Chicago and New York, which began May 18 and ended May 22. Military men were much interested, because the event did much to demonstrate the practical value of the bicycle for use in war time; roads improvement agitators think the race will call attention to the bad highways of the country, and help to bring about needed reform, and wheelmen are talking about the great contest for obvious reasons. The noted Indian fighter, General Nelson A. Miles has taken an active interest in the matter, and the message that was borne part way across the continent bore his signature.
Nearly 100 bicyclists, among them the swiftest and hardest in America, are participating in the run, and it is expected that 100 hours from the time Arthur Lumsden left Chicago, riding the first relay, another well known Chicago wheelman, N. H. Van Sicken will finish the last 25 mile relay into New York city. As the distance is very nearly 1,000 miles, the average speed of the 100 riders is about 10 miles an hour.
The route and distance out at each place follows: Chicago to Goshen, Ind., 111 miles; Goshen to Toledo, 224 miles; Toledo to Cleveland, 437 miles; Cleveland to Cincinnati, O., 425 miles; Cincinnati to Northeast, Pa., 468 miles; Northeast to Rochester, N. Y., 609 miles; Rochester to Syracuse, 689 miles; Syracuse to Utica, 742 miles; Utica to Albany, 837 miles; and Albany to New York city, 975 miles. The message from General Miles was carried in a pouch, and at New York it was delivered to Major General O. O. Howard.

Blaine Will Accept.
New York, May 23.—A special to the Evening Telegraph from Washington to-day says: I have the highest authority for saying that the Blaine family have withdrawn their objections to the renomination of Mr. Blaine. It now remains for the leader himself to act. Not only have I the best proof that all Mr. Blaine's relatives have consented to his candidacy, but I am assured that Mr. Blaine's only signal to his party that he has accepted will be silence.
Mr. Blaine's position in this—assuming that he allows the party to over-ride his recent letter: He either had to write that statement or resign his office, thereby putting his personal ambitions before the public interests. That was out of the question. To have permitted his name to be used in opposition to the president while occupying an office conferred upon him by the president would have been scandalous.
Besides, Mr. Blaine was really fearful of his physical condition, and did not want to provoke a bitter personal warfare. It is different now. Mr. Blaine will take no part in the convention directly or indirectly. If his party calls him to the lead in the coming fight he will not decline.

The Monument.

Harper's Weekly gives the following description of the Grant Monument: The architect, Mr. John H. Duncon, of New York, has designed a classical structure, with an exterior composed of material as light as will stand the severity of the climate.
The inside is to be pure white, with the exception of some well chosen ornamentation in black. The foundations of the edifice are now finished, and the first course of granite ten feet in height has been put under construction. The structure, which will be visible from all points of the upper part of the city, is placed at a slight angle to the Riverside Drive, so as squarely to face the point to the south on that approach where it first presents itself to the observer and it forms the terminus to the vista of 123d street looking toward the east. The general dimensions of the monument are about 100 feet square, exclusive of the steps and portico projection. The total height of the mausoleum will be 160 feet from the base-line, or nearly 300 feet from the water level of the Hudson river. From the centre of the hall floor to the dome is 100 feet, and the outer gallery, 130 feet above the ground-line, will afford a view of the surrounding country for many miles. The interior of the dome is supported by pendentives, figure subjects formed of marble mosaic, above which are thirteen openings into the outer gallery. In the panels over these openings are placed the seals of the original thirteen States, beneath disks with the names and emblems of all the States. Facing the south, near the beginning of the step approaches, will be the pedestal and equestrian statue of General Grant.
Surmounting four of the columns will be placed equestrian statues of his principal commanders, and panels on the east and west of the structure will receive bust reliefs of other officers associated with his victories. The black granite sarcophagus will rest in the crypt below the main floor, directly under the dome, which will receive light from the sky.

American Art.

A fair summing up of the present condition of American art appears in The Century, from the pen of Francis D. Millet, vice president of American leading art organization, the National Academy of Design. We as a people became conscious of our artistic deficiencies after the Philadelphia exposition, and at once sought to remedy them. After the close of that summer of education in 1876 art schools and art museums began to spring up throughout the country. Before then many American artists had studied in Europe, after they went across to foreign art schools more than ever. They have now come home in numbers, and the result of their education and of their subsequent labors is to some extent manifest.
To begin, our American artists have proved apt scholars. They reproduce the teaching of their foreign masters with careful labor and fidelity. With such care and fidelity indeed, that when their pictures are hung upon the walls of galleries with foreign paintings they cannot be distinguished from the foreign work by anything in either subject or treatment. This Mr. Millet thinks, is the chief criticism to be made on our native pictures. American art is now in that stage of development in which it is able to "execute with distinguished skill in the methods of others." But for the rest we are "still in the leading strings of school tradition and the glorification of technique."
There is no such thing as an American school of art or American style in the treatment of a picture. But our progress is full of hope. The artists who have been educated abroad have devoted themselves faithfully to teaching these beginners who are at home. So the fundamental principles have been well grounded. The rest will come. The field most attractive to his immediately before the American artist is that of portraiture. We have a national type of feminine beauty distinguished for symmetry and refinement; we have a "strongly accentuated masculine type." The typical American face is nervous, high strung and keen, possessing great elements of beauty. To reproduce this face will be one of the first achievements of the American school of art. Finally in the art institution which Mr. Carnegie has presented to Pittsburgh, with its income of $50,000 a year, we have the greatest and richest art museum in the world. The feature of most interest to the American art is moreover the fact that 90 per cent. of the money spent there for pictures must purchase works of art produced in this country.

Don't Monkey With the Snake.

It is stated that a rattle-snake cannot bite if held up by the tail. Would you like to put the statement to a practical test? Probably not; but how often do you take far greater risks? A snake-bite is not the only means of introducing poison into the system. If your blood is impure, if your liver is out of order, if you have blotches, pimples, boils or eruptions, "don't monkey with the snake?" Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the only specific against all blood-poisons, no matter of what name or nature. It is sold under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure, or your money will be refunded.
