Old Superstitions.
Queer Things in Which People Still Place Confidence.

In Michigan a double cedar knot is carried in the pocket to cure rheumatism and in New Hampshire men carried a gall from the stems of the golden rod for the same disease. A small white grub is in the gall, and he thought as long as the grub remained alive no rheumatism could get hold of him. Hickory nuts, the buckeye and his cousin, the horse chestnut, are other foes to rheumatism in different localities.

Some people wear a strange ring made of a potato with a hole through it for rheumatism, and others carry a plain potato in the pocket. The charm is more potent if the potato has been stolen. Almost anything seems to have rheumatism fighting properties, for in Southern Michigan a pebble in the pocket serves to ward it off.

A New Hampshire cure for sore throat is to wear about the neck a stocking, in the toe of which a potato has been tied. According to a main belief a money pieced and hung on a string around the neck prevents boils, croup, neuralgia. The effect of a Connecticut wadded nutmeg is unknown.

Among the negroes the most striking remedies are to be found. Witness "the combination of cure and spell, described under the name of 'conjouring a tooth,' in Alabama. In a lonely part of the woods with one of the opposite sex who is to carry an axe. The bearer of the axe chops around the roots of a white oak cut off with a large jackknife nine splinters from the roots of a tree, then cuts around the roots of the aching tooth with the knife, dips each of the nine splinters in the blood flowing from the cuts and finally buries the splinters at the foot of the tree from which they came. While doing this the operator repeats something you don't understand which is a charm.

From the same locality comes a curious remedy for chills and fever. Take the skin from the inside of an eggshell, go to a young persimmon tree three days in succession and tie a knot in the skin each day.

On the eastern shore of Maryland biliousness is cured by boring three holes in a carefully selected tree and walking three times around it, saying, "Go away, bilious!" It is a matter of utmost importance whether the one who performs the spell walks with the sun or against the sun, but no one knows which is the approved direction.

We have comparatively few phibers, none with a truly indigenous reputation, but there are some of European origin naturalized. Many of them have undergone a certain variation since they were brought home on this side of the Atlantic. Plants used in love divinations are common. In many parts of England and Scotland the familiar Southern wood is known as "lad's love," "lad-lov-lass" or "lad's love and lasses delight." Another British name for the plant is "old man's love," or simply "old man," from its use recommended by Phyllis.

In Woburn, Mass., this herb is called "boy's love," and it is said that if a girl tucks a bit in her shoes she will marry the first boy she meets. In other parts of Massachusetts it is thought that if girls put a piece of Southern wood down her back the first boy she meets will be her husband. In Boston, if a marriageable woman puts a bit of Southern wood under her pillow on retiring, the first man she sees in the morning will, so says the superstition be the one whom she is to marry.

Abraham Lincoln and Men of War Times.

Col. McClure needs no introduction to the public. He is well and widely known as a forceful and perspicuous student of men and events, as a writer of experiences, extraordinary alike in scope and interest.

Of the many books that have been published relating to Abraham Lincoln and his administration, this is among the most interesting and valuable. It is not a biography of Lincoln, nor a history of the Civil War, but it presents a series of pictures of Lincoln in his relation to the great events of his time and to the distinguished men who surrounded him, from the point of view of an experienced observer who was closely associated with the political movement of the day, and was frequently called into the confidential councils of the President.

Mr. McClure records in this book only those things of which he had personal knowledge, or which came to his knowledge directly, and his personal recollections of Lincoln present a truthful and vivid portrait of that great man at many of the critical periods of his life, such as has not been presented before.

The revelations of Lincoln's judgment and skill as a politician are particularly interesting, because this side of his character was known to comparatively few men living, although it formed an essential element in the public history of war times.

The successive chapters describe the relations of Lincoln with the members of his cabinet, the leaders in Congress, the Commanders of the Armies and others of the prominent men about him, whose various and often conflicting efforts and ambitions he so wisely combined to the service of the country. The book is written with entire independence and freedom from partisanship or prejudice, in a spirit of just appreciation, and each chapter gives a clear complete and considerate historical judgment of the subject to which it relates.

Going Too Far.

He Had a Somewhat Fastidious and Refined Appetite.

"Have you any cold victuals?" inquired the rusty-looking pilgrim, "to spare for a hungry—"
"No!" snapped the woman at the kitchen door.
"Perhaps I was wrong in asking for cold victuals," he rejoined, apologetically. "If I had suggested tenderloin steak with baked potatoes, madam, and a cup of cocoa—"
"You wouldn't have got that either."
"H'm! My own preference, I acknowledge, would have been roast turkey with cranberry sauce, chicken salad, a morsel of Roquefort cheese and French coffee, with perhaps a glass of—"
"It wouldn't have done you any good to ask for that, either, you impudent insubling vagabond! you ought to go to work!"
"Madam," interposed the rusty tourist, with dignity, "I can overlook your total inability to satisfy the gastronomic requirements of man with a somewhat fastidious appetite, but when you apply offensive epithets and offer unsolicited advice you are presuming altogether too far."
"Madam, good morning!"
And as he got around the angle of the kitchen he could plainly hear the dipperful of hot water strike the wall of the house opposite with a horrible swish.

Emperors on the Outs.

Kaiser William Bitter Toward the Czar. Serious Trouble Threatening.

BERLIN, May 29.—It is now reported that the Czar will cross over from Copenhagen to Kiel on Thursday, hold a half hour interview with the Emperor in the latter city and then return to the Danish capital. Preposterous as the report appears, it is generally credited here. The feeling has sprung up suddenly that the relations between the two courts are again exceedingly strained and that serious trouble is threatening.

The Emperor is smarting under the insult implied for him in the Czar's careless changes of plan. At the same time he is eager to have his visit of two years ago returned, in order that the Czar's dislike may be concealed from the world. Consequently should the Czar come, he would now be received with coolness, approaching rudeness, and should he stay away all courtesy between the courts would be ended by the snub. Confidence is expressed that, should the Czar try a make-shift meeting, like the proposed one at Kiel, the Emperor would let him feel the full weight of a Hohenzollern's resentment. This week's developments are expected to be more significant than any since the visit of the Empress Frederick in Paris.

Mexican Indians Revolt.

A telegram from Guaymas, Mexico, says on the 15th instant 200 Mayo Indians rose in rebellion and attacked the towns of Naojos and Sanignacio on the Mayo river district, Alamos. They marched against the town of San Pedro, but failed to attack it. The Mayor of Naojos was killed and the principal places of business were sacked. At Sanignacio the Chief of Police and his brother were killed. Several inhabitants were severely wounded.

The inhabitants of the town bravely rallied, repulsing the Indians, killing 14 Governor Torres was notified immediately, and State troops were sent in conjunction with the Federal soldiers to pursue the insurgents. The Federal troops, commanded in person by General Bandala, Commander of the Department, and General Otazo, chief of the Mayo section, intend to make a vigorous campaign against the Indians. The Mayo Indians heretofore have been peaceable, and the uprising is a great surprise. It is feared they have made an alliance with the Yaquis, who are concentrating all their forces for a prolonged fight. Unless the Mayos lay down arms on the approach of the troops a decree of extermination will be promulgated against them, the same as against the Yaquis. At a recent engagement with the Yaquis, near Los Palares, Chicuhullo, Yaqui, the chief was killed and two of his children were captured.
