An Adorable Array of Blondes.

What History Reveals to the Eager and Untiring Searchers After Truth.

Listen now to the adorable array of blondes history shows to us!

Macdaniel wiped the feet of Jo sus with her blonde locks.

Venus, god of beauty, mother of demigods and men, rinses the seafoam from her golden tresses.

The beautiful Cleopatra supplants all brunettes rivals in the heart of her royal lover; and, to do so, she had only to veil her pearly tears by the shining gold of her hair.

Julia, the immortal heroine of the "New Heloise," was blonde; blonde also, Aurora, when she opened with her rosy fingers the eastern doors to the triumphal chariot of the sun.

Blonde, also, were the three representative theological virtues, Faith, Hope, and Charity.

The search for the golden fleece had not for its sole object the conquest of a mine, or precious fleece, or to rob the treasure so carefully heaped by avaricious Aetes.

Those who composed it were attracted by a higher motive than gain, pillage, or adventurous piracy; they were drawn irresistibly by the fulfillment of Circe, herself the mother of Circe, the omnipotent and subtle blonde enchantress, who, the better to show her power upon men, went so far as to change them into grunting swine.

The beautiful Helen, whose carrying off caused the Trojan War, thus exerting an influence for centuries, was blonde.

We must also class in the fair-haired sisterhood Phryne, who when brought before Areonagus, found an all-powerful defense in the display of her charms as she threw aside her poplin clad only in the waves of her beautiful hair.

Her judges were so dazzled by the sight of such perfection that they granted her an instant pardon.

Dante's Beatrice was blonde.

"Armed of 'Jerusalem Delivered' was blonde also.

Tasso, when describing this heroine, was inspired by the fair and blonde Eleonora Este one of the most beautiful and remarkable women, with whom of course, he was desperately in love.

Ariosto's Angelica, with her splendid hair floating in the wind, was also a member of the fair-haired tribe.

The beautiful Panla of Toulouse was a blonde of an inimitable hue.

The people were so enchanted by her ideal beauty that they followed her in crowds. She complained to the city magistrates, and they in their wisdom decreed that she should not be annoyed in this way; but as her beauty, being a gift of Providence, did not belong exclusively to herself and people had a right to behold it, she was compelled to stand one hour every Sunday afternoon on her balcony in order that the people might gaze on her.

Blonde also were Agnes Sorel, Diana of Poitiers, the beautiful Gabrielle d'Estrees, Anne of Austria, Marguerite of Navarre, La Duchesse de Chevreuse, Ninon de Lenelos, and Mme. de Maintenon, the most precious conquest of Louis XIV.

Mlle. de Montpensier, la "grand mademoiselle," says in regard to herself in those piquant memoirs which she left to posterity, "I am so happy in being a blonde."

Mme. de Girardin, one of the most remarkable women of the century, was also one of the most perfect blondes ever seen.

"Circus Coming, Mary."

How the Family Came to an Amicable Understanding.

The head of the family lingered over his coffee. Clearly, something lay heavy on his mind. Now and then he darted a quick look at the partner of his joys and sorrows across the table and coughed lightly, only to turn his gaze again into his cup. At length he spoke.

"Circus coming, Mary?"

He sought to create the impression that he was voicing a casual reflection. The demure lady across the table nodded affirmatively.

"It's a good circus, I think."

He was playing with his fork absently. It was several minutes before he had anything further to say.

"I guess," he observed with an air which was only a faint imitation of the off-hand "that nothing is more instructive than a good circus."

The close observer might have noticed a shadow setting upon the fine face of the matron. No word fell from her lips, however.

"Especially for children."

He was folding his napkin carefully. "I suppose," he signed, stimulating regret, "that I'll have to go with our children."

"William!"

The partner of his joys and sorrows threw large quantities of astonishment, chagrin and reproach into a single word.

"After such a strict religious training as you have had," she exclaimed.

As he rose from the table he sighed in earnest. Standing irresolutely by the window he stared at the landscape, half in sadness, half in shame.

"William."

Her voice was something softer than before.

"William—"

She came and trustfully twined her arms about his neck.

Words of Wisdom.

A little sin is as black as a big one. If you want to feel right, do right. Every little act is the child of a great principle.

No deed can be small when the purpose is great. Nobody wants to go back until they first look back.

A sure way to punish yourself is to hate other people. The higher men rise the more dependent they become.

To be close-fisted with money is the highest kind of distrust.

A preacher with a warm heart will not long have a cold church. It is well to hope for success, but it is much better to deserve it.

The blindest men are the ones who think they have no faults. The truth always gives life to those who take it to their hearts.

No matter where we walk we are sure to be followed by somebody. It never makes the day any brighter to growl at the cloudy weather.

Prepare for little trials and you will never be overcome by big ones. It is hard to overcome a man who believes he is working for eternity.

The man who knows a great deal knows better than to try to tell it all. To be slow to anger is better than to own the best kind of a seven shooter.

People who pray right don't have very much trouble about living right. Statutes are molded with little touches. Characters are formed in the same way.

Higher criticism has not yet done a thing to make men more patient on wasday. The man who never makes any mistakes never does any work that will outlive him.

The hypocrite never tries to behave himself when he thinks that he is being watched.—Indianapolis, (Ind.) Ram's Horn.

Married Women Set Free. Governor Flower of New York, has signed the bill which permits married women to make contracts in her own name as freely as man may do.

Thus disappears from the statute book of New York the last trace of a Middle-Aged barbarian. The laws on this subject originated in the theory once again accepted that the wife was a chattel, the property of the husband.

Long after that theory disappeared the law still maintained many of the disabilities of married woman which could be justified only by the abandoned conception. The law is always slow to recognize changes in society and civilization, and it has been peculiarly slow and conservative in this.

But our generation has been very restless under these anachronisms of the law. One after another these disabilities of married women have been removed, until the last of them is blotted out in New York, and law now fully recognizes the married woman as an individual with a will, a capacity and natural rights of her own. It is well.

How soon will Pennsylvania follow? Her married women are still under many of the old disabilities.

A LEADER.—Since its first introducing, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor, until now it is clearly in the lead among pure medicinal tonics and alteratives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant, it is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of Stomach, Liver or Kidneys.—It will cure Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, and drive Malaria from the system. Satisfaction, guaranteed with each bottle or the money will be refunded. Price only 20c. per bottle. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Not the Man's Fault. "That man is utterly devoid of feeling."

"How do you know?"

"He sat on my hat and didn't know it until I told him."

"Straw hat, wasn't it?"

"Yes; but what of that?"

"Nothing, only I thought it couldn't be felt."

"Circus coming, Mary?"

He sought to create the impression that he was voicing a casual reflection. The demure lady across the table nodded affirmatively.

"It's a good circus, I think."

He was playing with his fork absently. It was several minutes before he had anything further to say.

Bits About The Bismarck

William, Not Herbet, the Iron Chancellor's Favorite Son.

Prince Bismarck's favorite son, is not, as most folk's believe, the elder Count Herbert, but the younger Count William popularly called "Bill," who is President of the Council in Hanover. Count "Bill" is the image of his father, although not so tall or massively built. At the President's House of Hanover there are two busts—one of Prince Bismarck at 40 and one of William Bismarck at about the same age. It is the genial Count "Bill's" little joke to get his guests to admit themselves to a declaration as to which is that of his father. It is impossible from a back view to tell which is which.

Count "Bill" is married to his first cousin, Prince Bismarck's only child. It has been a great disappointment to the ex-Chancellor that no male child has been born of this union, the Countess having blessed her husband with two girls. When the first child, Irene, was born at Hanover, Count Bill announced the fact to his father as follows: "This time a girl." To which the Prince replied: "I forgive you this time; but next time see it is a boy."

Prince Bismarck spells his name "Bismarck"; his sons Bismarck.

Saw Mill Employes Strike. MINNEAPOLIS, August 22.—A St. Clair, Wis., special says: About a thousand saw mill employes struck for ten hours and eleven hours pay, and the plants of five hour mills, are idle. No definite reply has been made by the mill owners to the committees, but there are no indications that the demand will be granted. The mills shut down are the Empire, the valley, the Dells and the Mississippi logging company. The strikers are orderly.

Klein's Silver Age, Duquesne and Bear Creek Whiskies, together with all the leading Pennsylvania Ryes, bottled by Max Klein, are the most reliable whiskies sold. See that Klein's signature is on every label, and his name blown in the bottle. It is a guarantee of purity. For sale by S. Shloss, wholesale agent, Williamsport, Pa. 37-30

Note our common sense time table:

New Advertisements. A THAND. In a dangerous emergency, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is prompt to act and sure to cure. A dose taken on the first symptoms of Croup or Bronchitis, checks further progress of these complaints. It softens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membrane, and induces sleep. As a remedy for colds, coughs, loss of voice, the grippe, pneumonia, and even consumption, in its early stages.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL excels all similar preparations. It is endorsed by leading physicians, is agreeable to the taste, does not interfere with digestion, and needs to be taken usually in small doses.

"From repeated tests in my own family, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has proved itself a very efficient remedy for colds, coughs, and the various disorders of the throat and lungs."—A. W. Barlett, Pittsburg, N. Y.

"For the last 25 years I have been taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for lung troubles, and am assured that it is the best remedy for such ailments."—T. M. Matthews, P. M. Sherman Ohio.

"My wife suffered from a cold; nothing helped her but Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which effected a cure."—R. Amero, Plympton, N. S.

The Titan of Chasms. A Mile Deep, 15 Miles Wide, 217 Miles Long, and Painted Like a Flower. The Grand Cañon of the Colorado River, in Arizona, is now for the first time easily accessible to tourists. A regular stage line has been established from Flagstaff, Arizona, on the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, making the trip from Flagstaff to the most imposing part of the Cañon in less than 12 hours. The stage fare for the round trip is only $20.00, and meals and comfortable lodgings are provided throughout the trip at a reasonable price. The view of the Grand Cañon afforded at the terminus of the stage route is the most stupendous panorama known in nature. There is also a trail at this point leading down the Cañon wall, more than 6,000 feet vertically, to the river below. The descent of the trail is a grander experience than climbing the Alps, for in the bottom of this terrific and sublime chasm are the high dreeds of mountains greater than any of the Alps range.

A book describing the trip to the Grand Cañon, illustrated by many full-page engravings from special photographs, and furnishing all needed information, may be obtained free on application to Geo. J. Byrne, 723 Broadway Block, Chicago, Ill. 37-30-30
