Democratic Watchman.

Bellefonte, Pa., Sept. 2, 1892.

Spokane.

Spokane is the principal city of eastern Washington, and a good point from which to view its agricultural and mineral resources of the land east of the Cascade Range. It used to be called Spokane Falls, after the falls in the Spokane river, which attracted the first settlers as a rallying-point, but the people dropped the word "Falls" in June, 1891, and Spokane is the city's full name. Long before its settlement the trails and roads from every point of the compass met there, and seemed to mark it as a natural distributing centre. Eight railroads meet there now. It is a dozen years old as a settlement, and now extends its broad streets and battalions of brick and stone buildings over a considerable part of the bowlike, level-bottomed basin in which it has been built. There are evergreen hills all around it, and upon one slope overlooking the town the well-to-do citizens have massed a considerable number of villas, many of which are both costly and handsome. Milling, the lumber trade, and jobbing in all the necessities of life are its main-stays, and possibly by the time this is published it will have started up its smeltery to lead the new industry which many think must become its main one when, amid the development of the innumerable mines of eastern Washington, it shall have become a great mining town. Its jobbing trade in 1890 amounted to $21,000,000. Spokane is a very enterprising. It has an opera-house that is the finest theatre west of the Mississippi River, and its Board of Trade, under the tireless energy of Mr. John R. Reavis, is incessantly at work to strengthen and enlarge the industries of the city. The place has 25,000 population. It lost 3000 last year as a result of the general monetary depression, but its gains continue, and the agricultural country contributory to it has grown steadily and suffered no set backs. It trades with 200 towns, and talks with 60 over its telephone wires. Its water power—having a minimum power of 32,000 horses—runs its electric cars, electric lights, cable cars, printing-presses, elevators, and all its small machinery. It is not rampant in its vices as most Northwestern cities are. Gambling is done under cover, the variety theatres are closed on Sunday, and there is even broached a proposition to close the saloons on Sunday. In justice to Spokane, I should explain that the leading men ascribe this mastery over public vice to the unique and high toned character of the leading citizens, who embrace a large proportion of Eastern blood, and good Eastern blood at that. Such an explanation is highly necessary here, for in the new Northwest public morality is sometimes regarded as a concomitant of failing business powers. Happily I can vouch for the fact that Spokane society is leavened by a considerable class of proud and cultivated men and women, who live in charming homes, and maintain a delightful intercourse with one another. They make it a very gay city—and they and the fine climate—and are fond of high-bred horses, good dogs and bright living, with dancing and amateur theatricals, good literature and fun. San Francisco is no longer peculiar in this respect, for Spokane shares her brilliancy among our Western cities.—From "Washington: the Evergreen State," by Julian Ralph, in Harper's Magazine for September.

Rattles kill Two Women.

Awful Encounter With the Deadly Reptiles on a Huckleberry Mountain. COUDERSPORT, Pa., Aug. 20. The details of a horrible encounter with rattlesnakes in which two women were killed by the venomous reptiles has been brought here by a commercial traveler from Gold, a village of this county. Several days ago Mrs. Jacob Nevins, Mrs. Sarah Harmon and three or four other women and their husbands went upon the mountains near Gold to pick huckleberries. Mrs. Harmon sat down to pluck the fruit by the side of a rock. A large rattler unseen by her, which lay on the rock, struck the woman on the jugular vein, causing a considerable rupture. She screamed, but bled to death in half an hour. What assisting Mrs. Harmon, Mrs. Nevins was bitten twice on the leg and once on the hand by another rattlesnake and died five hours afterward. The men in the party came to the rescue from nearby, gave the women whiskey, but to no purpose. They then killed seven huge rattlesnakes within a few yards of where the fated women were bitten and the whole party left the mountain in terror.

Seattle to Chicago on Foot.

John Howard and Wife Fast Winning Their wager of $5,000. CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 21.—John Howard and wife, of Seattle, are fast winning their wager of $5,000 that they could walk from Seattle to Chicago by between March 10 and September 1. Four persons started from Seattle, but two gave out near Cooshoque.

The terms of the wager are that every foot of the distance shall be walked and no stop made at any hotel or public house. Howard was to push a wheelbarrow containing a change of clothing and a rubber tent all the way. The route was to be over the Union Pacific and Chicago and Northwestern, the party to register at every railroad station on the way.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard registered in the Northwestern station at Cedar Rapids, Aug. 17. They had stood the trip well and were so far ahead of time that they determined to attend a Veterans' reunion Thursday. Mrs. Howard is clad in male attire and from her bronzed complexion looks like a half-breed boy of sixteen.

After trying many remedies for catarrh during the past twelve years, I tried Ely's Cream Balm with complete success. It is over one year since I stopped using it and have had no return of catarrh. I recommend it to all my friends.—Milton T. Palm, Reading.

Born in the Minority.

A thin, shabby, dignified man was sitting alone on a bench in the park. There was an inviting air of repose about his surroundings. This prompted a reporter to stop and take a seat on the same bench. Five minutes later the shabby man faced about and queried solemnly: "This is the nineteenth century, ain't it?" "Yes," said the reporter.

"Thank you." He was quite serious about it. After a thoughtful interval he asked: "This is a civilized country ain't it?" "Yes."

"Thank you." He folded his arms deliberately, nodded grimly, and continued calmly: "God made us all didn't He?" "Yes."

"Thank you." He nodded again, and then he was silent for several seconds. Finally he waved his arms, a comprehensive gesture, and said: "We are the people, ain't we?"

"And the people run this government, don't they? The people have rights, haven't they?" "Yes."

"That's it," said the solemn citizen. "That's where you're wrong. The theory's all right. No doubt about that. But do you know who runs this government?"

"Who does?" "The majority, sir; I watched this thing a long time. The majority run this country. The majority have all the rights. Do you know what the matter with me?"

"I was, been, evidently, something wrong, but it would have been unkind to say so. The reporter told him that he didn't know.

"I'm in the minority, sir. I have always been in a minority, sir. Look at me. Minority—that's what the matter. You can see it sticking out. You can read it in my face. Minority." He shook his head sadly.

"Do you know my advice to you?" "No."

"It's this. Young man, be in the majority in this world and in the minority in the next. God bless you. Good night."

Tale of a Missing Sock.

"I wonder where the dickens that devilish pup carried my sock to," said a well-known citizen of Sixth avenue Thursday morning as he came down stairs to breakfast.

"I haven't the least idea," replied the wife, "he is always running away with something; but never mind, get a clean pair, it's time you were changing them socks anyway, you've been wearing them a month now, and really a man should change his socks at least every three weeks during this hot summer weather."

The man hunted up the clean socks, put them on and then sat down to breakfast.

They had hot pan cakes, and while he ate his wife kept baking from a crock of batter on the floor near the stove.

"Say, wife," said the man, "that pan cake flour must be spoiled. The pan cakes have a d— musty smell, so as to speak."

"They said at the store it was fresh and I only got it yesterday."

"Don't care a continental, something must be fell in and died," said the man.

He kept on devouring the cakes all the same, but did so with a string of remarks between bits such as: "Ratty messen," "limberger ain't it?" "Great soot but she's musty," "I guess we'll change our grocer," "d— a grocery anyway."

All this time the wife laded out the batter from the crock, baked away and held her peace.

The batter ran low and as the wife made a deep dive to the bottom for a full ladle up came something foreign looking. Both gazed in horror upon it. Low and behold it was the man's missing sock.

He fired quick certain and a hasty discharge in the crock of all the batter the breakfast man had eaten, while the wife sadly led the pup, who had caused the mischief, into the back yard and killed him.

The above tale is true in every particular.—Beaver Falls Tribune.

The Third Party in the South.

But for the fact that the leaders of the Farmers' Alliance in the Southern States made their followers believe that the Lodge Force bill was dead and buried there would not such a time have been any of their party in the South worth talking about; and, notwithstanding the duplicity, active or passive, of most of the Republican leaders and all or nearly all of their party organs on the subject of the Force bill, those who have been deluded about its death and burial are rapidly learning the truth.

Before the dawn of November every farmer will comprehend that votes against Cleveland and Democratic Congressmen will count as votes in favor of the Lodge Force bill, and the third party in the Southern States will be reduced to a skeleton.

Any man in any Southern State who should knowingly lend his support, directly or indirectly, to the Lodge Force bill would not dare to look an honest woman in the face, and honest men would regard him with scorn. It is in the very nature of things that such should be the case. From the experiences in some of the States more terrible than that of the war, and from traditions which curdle the blood of rising generations, nothing imaginable could be so dreadful to the white men and women of the South as negro domination.

There is not even an honest negro in the South who has acquired an interest in the war and has family to look after who would not dread it.

The friends of Mr. Cleveland in the Northern States need feel no concern about a third party in the South, nor need they waste anathemas on the Democratic renegades in that section who are trying to play the role of Alliance brokers in treating with Republican emissaries; for they will be unable to deliver the goods.—Philadelphia Record.

His Fearful Revenge.

From the Detroit Free Press. "On a train, down in Indiana recently," said the drummer as he lit a fresh cigar and handed several around, "I was on a crowded passenger coach and next to me sat a wild-eyed looking man with what I thought was a gun in his pocket. He twisted around nervously for a few minutes after I had sat down beside him and at last he turned to me. 'You see that woman up there in the front end of the car,' he said 'that unwholesome fellow with a slim fellow settin' alongside of her?'"

"She sat about ten seats ahead of us and was in reality a conspicuous object, so I could not deny seeing her. I nodded and he went on: 'Well, she's my wife.' 'Why aren't you up there with her?'"

"She's 'lopin,' he said briefly. 'You mean she is running away with the man beside her?'"

"That's the size of it, mister." "Well, now that you've caught the guilty couple I suppose you will punish them severely?"

"He pulled his revolver out and I became exceedingly nervous. 'That looks like it might be enough, don't it?' he asked, with an ugly glitter in his eye.

"I didn't know whether to call the conductor or what to do. 'You will do nothing desperate on the car in the presence of the passengers,' I said soothingly.

"He looked at his revolver and tried the hammer once or twice, 'You think this might settle it, don't you?' he repeated.

"As it was about two feet long—with a hole in it like a funnel I could not doubt its efficacy, and said so. 'I am goin' to have vengeance,' he said in a hoarse whisper, 'on that cuss and he'll never forget it.' 'With that?' I asked, nodding toward the gun.

"No," he said, putting it away much to my relief, 'but with something a heap sight worse, and I expected to see him draw a knife with a saw edge and hooks on the point.

"What are you going to do? I inquired, with a faint hope that the conductor might intervene upon this condition. 'Let him have her,' he said, 'with such a powerful sense of satisfied justice in his tone that I almost laughed right in his face.

"He got off at the next station without having been seen by the runaways, and when I got a look at the woman and heard her voice, I was almost sorry I had not let the merciful revolver do its work."

Beefsteak fingers.—Take two pounds of tendersteak, cover it with equal parts of vinegar and water; season with pepper and salt, chopped onion and a pinch of ground cloves; cover it closely, and let it cook gently for an hour; then remove the meat from the liquor and let it become cold, when cut it into strips about three inches long; dip this into beaten egg, then roll in cracker crumbs that are seasoned with parsley and celery; cover the meat well with the crumbs and fry in hot fat until nicely browned; place in a hot dish garnished with parsley, serve with mashed potatoes and gravy, made from liquor in which the meat was cooked.—Boston Herald.

For many years Mr. B. F. Thompson, of Des Moines, Iowa, was severely afflicted with chronic diarrhoea. He says: At times it was very severe, so much so that I feared it would end my life. About seven years ago I chanced to procure a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It gave me prompt relief, and I believe cured me permanently, as I now eat or drink without harm anything I please. I have also used it in my family with the best results." For sale by Frank P. EXCURSION CLUB TO ATTEND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

If you have any desire to visit the World's Fair at Chicago bear in mind that the United World's Fair Excursion Co. is a sound organization, with ample capital to fulfill their promises. The company sells tickets on the installment plan. Apply to A. H. Roby, Sect. 403 Exchange Building Boston.

WHY IS IT POPULAR.—Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

With nearly 7000 saloons—375 of them on one street—and thirty theatres, all open on Sunday, Chicago doesn't care very much about the World's Fair being open on Sunday or not. Those 7000 saloon men naturally want a hack at the visitors at least one day in the week without opposition.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the few remedies which are recommended by every school of medicine. Its strength, purity, and efficacy are too well established to admit of doubt as to its superiority over all other blood-purifiers whatever. Ayer's Sarsaparilla leads all.

Mrs. Stephen Berry, of Walton, N. Y., was stung on the right temple by a honey bee, and died within 30 minutes of the time when she was stung. According to medical opinions the poison was implanted in an artery.

Ivy Poisoning.

So many people are poisoned every year by ivy that it is well to learn how to distinguish the plant at a glance and avoid it. Orchard and Garden tells how to distinguish it from Virginia creeper, which is harmless, but often confounded with the ivy. The woodbine has five leaves, the poison ivy only three. The latter also has leaves of a lighter, more vivid green and more glossy. It climbs on fences and stone walls, which it covers thickly, but often branches out more like a tree than a vine. Many sufferers from ivy poisoning have been cured by bathing the poisoned parts in a strong lye made from wood ashes, while a few doses of olive oil, taken immediately, will often give relief.

How Much Do You Get?

Mr. Carnegie draws $4,600,000 a year as his part of the profits of the iron business—that is, he gains every second ninety-five cents; every minute, $5.70; every hour, $343.40; every day $4,120.85; every week, $28,846.60; every month $125,000. How much do you get out of the tariff? Let every man answer this question for himself, remembering that every dollar Carnegie makes is pure bounty, according to the statement of the protectionists, because, if they tell the truth, manufacturers would not pay at all in this country but for this blessed tariff.

SAVED HIS SIGHT.

PERHAPS HIS LIFE. Blood Poisoning After Scarlet Fever. Read the following from a grateful mother: "My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with cancer. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he

COULD NOT OPEN HIS EYES. I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved his sight, even if not his very life. You may use it in testimony in any way you choose. The above statement is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. And I can add that my testimony was entirely voluntary and not bought and paid for, nor a small fact polished up and enlarged. And the case of my boy is not the only one that I know of where
