

Pine Grove Mentions.

Columbus day will be observed in our town today. A big parade is looked for. Elegant music and eloquent addresses will be in order.

Wm. G. Gardner is losing of ten pounder. It's a boy, while the ruddy face of Luther Sunday beams with joy when he says his boy is of less weight.

Road supervisor Fye is confined to the house with pleuritic trouble. The new farm house of D. H. Fye is under cover and nearly ready for the plasterers.

Mr. Henry Meyers lost, by death, a valuable young mare.

Misses Flora McClellan and Nora Flory, two of Tusseyville's pleasant young ladies, are the guests of Mrs. Emma Meek, this week.

Mrs. H. M. Meek, of Altoona, is this week visiting her venerable parents Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kiechlin, on Main street.

Barbara Krebe has purchased the former home of F. E. Meek, Chestnut Hill street and took possession last week.

Mr. William Stem and family now occupy the Dr. Orndorf mansion, on Main street, just vacated by Dr. H. B. Livingston, who gave up a lucrative dental practice in this section and moved to Altoona. To the people of the Mountain city, we would commend the doctor, his estimable wife and interesting little family. Our town is now, the first time in thirty-eight years, without a dentist.

A useful and ornamental porch now graces the entire front of D. H. Weaver's dwelling and store building on the corner.

Mr. J. G. Bailey's flock of twenty-four head of blooded South and Shorthorn sheep were almost annihilated by dogs, one night last week, away in a back field. Some were killed outright and several had to be killed to relieve them of their misery and all but four were bitten. Whose dogs were they?

One evening last week a party comprised entirely of the fair sex hid themselves out to the country, halting at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Snyder, where they enjoyed the evening hours. After which Miss Marion Snyder drove her guests, in a two horse conveyance, to town where a party of brave, in the darkness of the night, attempted to frighten the masqueraders but in this they failed, and, after getting a good hissing made good their retreat. Some crawling in through windows others scaling perch roofs, so hasty was the retreat. But the ladies had their picket force well displayed and the alphas and street corners were soon cleared of the would be masqueraders, every one of them being detected, but the one that took to the mountains who is yet at large.

Our agricultural friends are taking advantage of the fine weather and are busy cribbing the corn crop which is very much below the average. The potato crop has also been tallied as one of the poorest in many years.

Last Thursday evening, the 13th inst., the delightful home of Mrs. Judge Smith, on Water street, was illuminated within and without in being for the marriage ceremony of her youngest and accomplished daughter, Mary, who was wedded to Mr. Charles Shultz, of Altoona. At 7 o'clock sharp the bridal party, attended by Mr. Frank Smith, a brother of the bride, as groomsmen, and Miss Mary Stem, as maid of honor, entered the parlor where a number of relatives and friends awaited their appearance. Rev. C. T. Atkins performed the ceremony and then the newly married couple received congratulations, when the festive board was surrounded and every body was happy. The Pine Grove Cornet Band, the calliophanes and the small boy with his horn all were heard from and were paid off only on the appearance of the bride and groom and boxes of cigars sufficed and all was again silent by the midnight hours. The newly married couple took the 10 o'clock train at Penna. Furnace station amid a shower of old shoes and rice. Harrisburg was their destination and after a short honeymoon trip will go to house-keeping in Altoona where the groom is engaged in a clerical position. The Wrenwashes wish their married life to be as cloudless as their wedding day.

Last Saturday p. m. mail brought the sad news of the death of former Pine Grove boy Albert Kayes. His aged parents, wife and children mourn his death, which was caused by pneumonia at his home in Bellefonte, on the 13th inst., aged 37 years. He leaves a wife and four children. For some years he has been connected with the Washington hotel, of Bedford, and was known as one of the best hotel men in that part of the State and was always ready to aid his fellow men and in the property and advancement in the community in which he lived. He was perhaps better known as the proprietor of the hotel where he was brought over on the Broad Run, and buried in the cemetery at Huntington on the 15th, at 2 o'clock, p. m.

Notwithstanding the dull times heard in every locality the Meyers carriage shops are running on full time and strong hands. Among the numerous rigs in course of construction is a splendid hearse. When completed it will size up for style, beauty and finish second to none in the State. It is built for J. B. Wilson, of McVeytown, Pa.

The I. O. F. No. 276 Penna Valley Lodge officers for the ensuing term were duly installed on the evening of the 14th inst. In the absence of T. D. G. M. Rankin, P. G. Akeley officiated and duly installed J. P. N. G. B. Heberling, V. G. Ast. Secretary; H. M. Krebs, Treasurer; J. G. Heberling, Conductor; J. B. Krebs, Warden; N. T. Krebs, O. S. G. Ward, W. J. Meyers.

FAUBLE'S BROCKERHOFF HOUSE BLOCK.

What all this tin politics masquerading as business is costing the public maybe seen from some facts brought out in last Saturday's issue of the National Provisioner. It states that "fully 90 per cent." of the reported production has been roofing plates—that is, terno plate which we were producing before McKinley's law was ever heard of, and which an obliging Treasury Department ruled might be included in the returns of the industry "created" by the doubled tax. The same paper also quotes prices in the New York market for the present time compared with two years ago, as follows:

Table comparing prices of American tinplate in August '90 and Sept. '92. Lists items like L.C. 20x28 charcoal terno, M.F., Worcester, Dyer, etc.
