When the Coteaus are first entered a When the Coteaus are first entered a scene of desolation forces itself upon the vision, but this is soon relieved by a magnificent perspective of water and landscape. The mountains are singularly abrupt. Valleys which at this season are luxuriant with vegetation and fragrant with blooming flowers wind among the hills. Lovely fresh water, with surface smooth as glass, shimmers in the sunlight. Myriads of birds awaken the echoes with melodious warbling. Small game of various kinds is almost constantly in sight. The hunter can travel for miles without detecting the first sign of civilization. The name Coteau, or Coteaux, means the

the Hills of the Dakotahs, or the Souix (Cutthroat) Indians. Deer, antelope, coyotes, badgers, and foxes disport by the waters of those mountain lakes and offer excellent sport to Nimrode who seek for it in that direction. • There are still a great many beaver on the creeks which flow from the hills into the Missouri or the James. This is the prairie chicken season and hunting parties are thick along the foot of the hills. There is simply no limit to the game and the After another month of duck and chicken shooting the sporismen will agination, however vivid, has but fee-begin deer stalking in the Coteans. bly pictured to him. In the Missouri bottoms north of In the Missouri bottoms north of Bismark there is big game, and the hunting there is carried on successfully in the winter months. There is less truth, and it is to the season of the ex-truth, and it is to the season of the ex-truth and it is to the season of the ex-truth and it is to the season of the ex-truth and it is to the season of the ex-truth and it is to the season of the exhunting there is carried on successfully will show that I have told but half the in the winter months. There is less truth, and it is to the season of the exchance of getting lost along the Missouri than in the Coteaus and Bad Lands. The river country is timbered, and on that account is made the winter quarters of large game. While the talking is comparatively safe, it is hard work in that region, and is not followed to any great extent by visiting sportsmen after the stormy season comes on. Farmers along the Missouri get a good many deer every winter, but hunters can do better along in October and November. Rattlesnakes are thick in any kind. the river bottoms during the warm weather, but after the sharp frosts of October have set in , they are seldom seen and do little harm. A great advantage to sportsmen anywhere east of the Missouri is that there are no rattle-snakes, Farmers and old frontiermen do well in the Missouri country during the winter, sometimes making big money out of deer, but tenderfeet will be more comfortable out of there after the first of December. One of the most interesting places on earth, as well as a fine hunting ground for large game, is the Bad Lands. For wild and weird scenery, for curious formations, and for opportunities to get lost, the Bad Lands beat the world. It is incomparable so far as the northern frontier is concerned for a wild outdoor life. There some buffalo, but more bear. Deer, are common. There are some mountain sheep, an occasional wildcat, any numper of wolves, and a variety of feathered game. There are the wildest kind of canons to traverse, and the steepest kind of hills to climb. No man can pass a week in the Bad Lands without having adventures to relate. Hunting in that region is rough and wild enough to satisfy the most romatic turn of mind. If a fellow wants to test his nerve he can tackle a cinnamon bear or a panther- It is a fact that the Marquis de Mores killed a cinnamon there single-handed and alone, after lying out all night to find the brute. The Marquis used only a hunting knife, but a gun that will throw an ounce bullet three quarters of a mile is much safer. As a nerve tester. however, De Mores took the proper course. A hunting party going to the Bad Lands needs to leave the railroad at Medora or Glendivine or tramp twenty miles. Then they will get clear of the cattle ranches and find good sport. December hunting tours for deer are becoming popular. A little snow is an advantage, and it is seldom as deep in that section as it is east of the Missouri, or anywhere in the Missouri bottoms. It is a little early for venison at pres-ent, and there is nothing doing in the Bad Lands, except on the part of cowboys and other pioneers. The great army of sports-men are just now busy bled those of arsenical poison. It is among the full-breasted chickens in the Dakota wheat fields. Duck will follow as they begin their migration southward. Wisconsin and Minnesota hunters who to spending a week or two with an expensive outfit in shooting half-a dozen mallards may think they are having fun, but they do not ers were dangerously ill. know what sport is. Duck are slaughtered by the hundred in this country.

The exposition will show not only what has been done, but what can be confidently predicted as the outcome of persistent and well-directed energy. GENTLEMEN :- I had suffered with Rheuma-GENTLEMEN: ---I had suffered with Rheuma-tism for many years, when, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, your cure was re-commended to me. I had tried upon myself everything known to me, (I am a doctor of fif-ty-one years experience) and had dispaired of ever being cured. Your remedy was taken according to directions, and after using the second package, the disease left me entirely and no rheumatic pain or ache has troubled me since. I can recommend it without hesitancy to all afflicted with the disease, and being familiar with the ingredients contained in the com-pound, can recommend them as being non-injurious to the constitution, and as being the most efficient blood remedy known. Somebody Tampered with the Soup at a Gath ering of Ohio Dunkards. ST. MARY'S, O., Nov .- Poisoned soup broke up a large meeting of Dunkards at Philipsburg, in Sarke County, yesterday, and more than a hundred members of the faith are now critically ill. It is customary with the Dunkards at these meetings to board themselves, and soup holds a prominent place in the bill of fare. Yesterday the soup was made in a large kettle and many of those present helped themselves from it. Shortly afterwards all those who had partaken of the stuff were seized with convulsions and cramps in the stomach. The meeting broke up in a hurry, and those who were not able to reach their homes were cared for by neighbors.

In each case the symptoms resemsuspected that the poison was placed in the soup by some one having grudge against the Dunkards. It is believed that croton oil was also used. Word reached nere to-day that one
