Cholera and the Fair.

From the Newark Advertiser. It is rather early to begin to worry about the possible invasion of the United States by cholera next year. But now that European experts in sanitation are apprehensive that the disease will break out again, next spring, American newspapers have begun to agitate the subject, special anxiety being felt on account of the danger which the great Columbian Fair would invite, in case the scourge should reappear abroad. An agent of the Associated Press has interviewed the German Imperial commissioner for the World's Fair Herr Wernuth, in Berlin, and also Professor Koch, the famous bacteriologist. Herr Wernuth treated the matter very lightly, saying that although the bulk of the German exhibit would be shipped to the United States from Hamburg, he thought there was no danger. The United States Consul at Hamburg said the same thing, adding that all goods shipped by way of Hamburg were thoroughly disinfected before being cleared. Prof. Koch's dictum, of course is far more important than that of either of these laymen. He said that it had been repeatedly demonstrated that cholera is not communicable by contact, but by article infected with germs which may be taken into the system. Goods of metal or stone, or those packed in wooden or metal cases, could not possibly carry the cholera contagion with them. Fabrics that had been used by patients suffering from the cholera might be affected by excreta from their persons and the disease thus be spread abroad. It is hardly necessary to say that there is not the least danger that the cholera will or can be introduced into the United States in this manner.

Chicago people need not be told that their safety lies in keeping persons from cholera infected districts away from their city, if they would avoid the disease. This is about all the advice that Professor Koch has to offer on the subject, however; and our people know already how careful it is to exclude visitors of this description. We must be prepared for all possibilities. It is certain that the cholera has not been stamped out in Europe. A case was reported in Lyons, France, on Saturday, and on the same day five new cases and three deaths were reported from Budapest. The cold weather, while it does not kill the cholera germ, mitigates the ravages of the disease and retards its propagation. That much has been proved by experience.

As soon as another warm season opens unless thorough measures are taken to prevent it, the disease will resume its dreadful operations in Europe; but it is impossible to say now whether the scourge will take on greater or less proportions than it did during the summer of 1922. So far as our own people are concerned, the most practicable plan that prevention can take is the enactment of a new system of quarantine laws by Congress this winter. This may be expecting too much of a body of men whose official life ends next March, and whose next session will last only three months. But something must be done to give the public health superiority over commercial regulations at quarantine stations. A cholera panic would simply ruin the great Fair.

How Camphor is Made.

A Resinous Gum Which Exudes From A Tree in Japan. Many of the seeds of the Camphor tree have been sent to the Department of State from Japan in the hope of affording to the United States a chance to add this valuable substance to its vegetable products. The tree is a species of laurel, and grows in extensive forests in the mountainous regions of the south of Japan far from the sea. Large groves are owned by the Japanese Government, the wood being very desirable for shipbuilding. Many of the trees attain an enormous size, often measuring twelve feet in diameter and sometimes staining twenty feet. The seeds or berries grow in clusters, resembling black currants in size and appearance. The fine grain of the wood renders it particularly valuable for cabinet work.

The camphor is a resinous gum. To get it, the tree is necessarily destroyed; but, by a stringer's law of the land, another is planted in its stead. The simple method of manufacture employed by the natives is as follows: The tree is felled to the earth and cut into chips. A big metal pot is partly filled with water and placed over a slow fire. Then a wooden tub is fitted to the top of the pot and the chips of camphor wood are placed in this. The bottom of the tub is perforated, so as to permit the steam to pass up among the chips. A steam-tight cover is fitted on the tub, from this tub a bamboo pipe leads to another tub, through which the enclosed steam, the generated camphor, and oil flow. This second tub is connected in like manner with the third. The third tub is divided into two compartments, one above the other, the dividing floor being perforated with small holes to allow the water and oil to pass to the lower compartment. The upper compartment is supplied with a layer of straw, which catches and holds the camphor in crystals. The camphor is then separated from the straw, and packed in wooden tubs of 133 pounds each, and is ready for market.

After each boiling the water runs off through a faucet, leaving the oil, which is utilized by the natives for illuminating and other purposes. Adulteration of camphor gum is practised mostly by adding water just as far as the buyer will tolerate it. Sometimes the purchaser will find that twenty pounds of water has run out of a tub in twelve hours. The unadulterated article, known as "old dry," can sometimes be bought but not often. In a letter on the subject newly received by the Department of State, Consul Smithers writes from Osaka, Japan that it would be very desirable to send a competent agent from this country to Japan, who should visit the camphor-producing districts and study the process of manufacture, packing, etc.

Poor Man's Land.

The Old Settler Could Not Understand Why Fish Should Stay Around It

One day as I rode along a branch of the Cumberland river far up in the Kentucky Mountains, where nature was about as poor and scraggy as she could well be, I met a thin and slow-faced man coming up the bank from a pretty shady pool with a fishing-pole in his hand. Thinking I might take a turn myself at it I spoke to him. "Been fishing?" I inquired, after the usual salutation. "Some," he replied. "Catch anything?" "Some." "Where are they?" "Thrown 'em back." "What was the matter with them? Too small?" "No size enough, but no good." "Why weren't they any good?" I asked, wondering what could injure the fish in such fine water. "Cause they wuzn't," he said. "Cause isn't any reason," I insisted. He took it kindly, if almost total inattention could be called lack of resentment. "Well, it's fish for fish, I jist fish for fun. A fish that'll stay in a country that is as mean and pore ez this is, when it kin get out uv it so doggoned fast, ain't fiten for a decent man to eat. I wish to gracious I wuz a fish fer about a week." And I was so moved by his look of woe that I handed him over my personal bait can and he almost emptied it.

Suggestions to a Guest.

Do not let the old saying, "the first day the man is a guest, the second a burden and the third a pest" be applied to you. Endeavor to time your arrival so that it shall not interfere with your friends' meal hours, and arrange so that your baggage shall be delivered without being a care to them. Do not overstay your welcome; do not even stay as long as you are asked to. Allow your hostess time to attend to her household duties; observe the hour at which her husband is likely to return from business, and try to arrange so that he may find his wife alone at that time; you can easily find an excuse for absenting yourself. Try to be unobtrusive in your friction which may exist in the household machinery, and by your punctuality do your best toward keeping it in regular motion. Be thoughtful of your hostess affectionate to her children and courteous to her servants. When leaving bestow some little gift upon each of the servants, and send something to the cook; she is generally the one in the house whose work is most increased by the presence of visitors, and she is usually the one ignored in the general present-giving which ensues as the guests prepare to depart.—November Ladies Home Journal.

Winter Tours to California, Florida and Other Points of Interest.

Some idea of the amount of traveling done by Americans as a people, and the comfort and luxury at their command, is set forth in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's announcement of its personally-conducted tours for 1923. First comes a series to the Golden Gate, starting from New York, Philadelphia, and Harrisburg, February 8th, March 2d, and March 29th, 1923. Tourists will travel by superbly appointed special trains of Pullman drawing-room sleeping, dining, smoking, and observation cars, under the supervision of a Tourist Agent and Chaperon. Next in importance comes a series of five to Florida—January 31st, February 14th and 28th, March 14th and 28th. The first four admit of two whole weeks in the sunny South, while tickets for the fifth tour are good to return by regular trains until May 30th, 1923. They will be conducted on the same general principles, and maintained at that high standard manifested on all Pennsylvania Railroad Company's personally-conducted tours. For information and detailed itineraries now being prepared, apply to Ticket Agents or Tourist Agents, 849 Broadway, New York; 860 Fulton Street, Brooklyn; or 233 South Fourth Street, Philadelphia.

Winter Excursion Tickets on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This territory includes the resorts of New Jersey, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, and Cuba. The magnificent facilities of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with its many connections, makes this the favorite line for winter travel.

If I thought that was so, I might. Mrs. Plankington—Why what do you mean? Don't you believe what I tell you? Willie—Ma told me not to.

The Best Authorities—Such as Dr. Dio Lewis, Prof. Gross, and others, agree that catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It therefore requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effectually and permanently cures catarrh. Thousands praise it.

It is said that William Walter Phelps, United States Minister to Germany will build a magnificent country house on his 1,000 acre farm in New Jersey as soon as his diplomatic duties are over and settle down for a while as a country gentleman. Minister Phelps's country house in New Jersey was burned down several years ago, and the ruins are still to be seen near Englewood.

An honest Swede tells his story in plain but unmistakable language for the benefit of the public. "One of my children took a severe cold and got the croup. I gave her a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and in five minutes later I gave her one more. By this time she had to cough up the gathering in her throat. Then she went to sleep and slept good for fifteen minutes. Then she got up and vomited; then she went back to bed and slept good for the remainder of the night. She got the croup the second night and I gave her the same remedy with the same good results. I write this because I thought there might be some one in the same need and not know the true merits of this wonderful medicine." Charles A. At a fancy grocery. "A pound of tea, please." "Black or green?" "That makes little difference. I want it for my mother, and she is quite blind."

I have been a great suffer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely, it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

SAVED HER SIGHT. MEDICAL SCIENCE FAILED.

Another Wonder Performed by Hood's Sarsaparilla. "My little girl, Hazel, is now four years old. Two years ago she had the Grip. After recovery her eyes grew inflamed and suppurated. For over 7 months she had to have her eyes bandaged and stay in a dark room. The family doctor and an oculist did everything possible. She did not improve and even grew worse. At last after six months he gave us the discouraging opinion that the corner of one eye was destroyed and the SIGHT WAS ENTIRELY GONE. That it was doubtful if she would ever be able to see any with the other, as the sight was rapidly being destroyed in that also. We thought her doomed to permanent blindness. She suffered intense pain and kept her head buried in the pillow most of the time. If light was admitted to the room she would cry as if BURNED WITH A HOT IRON. As she was weak and badly run down we thought before continuing the treatment we would try to build up her system and renew her strength. We began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She began to improve rapidly and by the time she had finished the first bottle we were able to remove the bandages and found that she could bear the light and that the sight was returning, much to our delight. She took two bottles in all, and then was as well as ever once more. It is now a year since we began giving it to her. Her eyes ARE PERMANENTLY CURED. She can see perfectly, has had no signs of any further trouble and is in every respect perfectly healthy. We have great faith in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. This remarkable cure is known all over this part of the city and can be vouched for by any of the neighbors." W. H. BIRRELL, 1363 Hastings street, Detroit, Mich.

GENTLEMEN—I had suffered with Rheumatism for many years, when, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, your cure was recommended to me. I had tried upon myself everything known to me, (I am a doctor of fifty-one years experience) and had despaired of ever being cured. Your remedy was taken according to directions, and after using the second package the disease left me entirely and no rheumatic pain or ache has troubled me since.
