"IF I SHOULD MEET THEE."

If I should meet thee in a distant land,
Nought should I ask for but a smile from
thee,
A silent pressure of thy clinging hand,
A glance of recognition full and free;
For not as strangers surely must we stand
In that far home beyond the eternal sea!
If I should meet thee in a distant land,
Nought should I look for but a smile from thee.

Loosed for a season is the golden band
That I nked our lives in sweet community;
But I no other face save thine should see
Mid all the concourse beautiful and grand,
If I should meet thee in a distant land.

Compulsory Education.

An Interesting Disputation Going on in the Scranton Papers,

There is an interesting disputation going on in the Scranton newspapers with regard to the propriety of state legislation in favor of compulsory education. The Scranton Truth opposes such legislation, and has gone to the trouble to obtain a voluntary expression of opinion on the subject. Opinion in the neighborhood of Scranton seems to be about equally divided "for" and 'against." Out of 1,771 votes cast, 879 persons favored compulsory education, and 892 opposed it.

The "Scranton Tribune" believes in compulsion, and backs up its belief with an ingenious parable, as follows: "C tizen Smith is a bachelor. Citizen Brown is a parent. The law as it now stands taxes Smith to support schools for Brown's children: You will get back an equivalent for your money in the better social and moral condition that will result from the education of Brown's children.'

"Very well. Smith is not stingy, and he pays his school tax. But later on he finds that Brown's children are not being sent to that school. Brown is opposed to 'compulsion;' he insists with a flourish that he is 'boss of his home and of every one in it.' Smith doesn't say anything to this, but after a while he observes that one of the Brown children has, in his idleness and vagrancy, learned to steal. The child is sent to prison. Now mark the sequel.

"Again the law comes to Smith This time it says: 'Smith, you're a taxpayer; we demand money from you to help pay for the prison fare of Brown's child.' 'But,' says Smith, when I paid my school tax you told me it was to keep Brown's child out of prison. Why didn't it do that? And the law replies: "Can't help that Brown couldn't be compelled to send his child to school. Hence the child didn't go: it loafed on the streets: became victous, and we had to lock it up. Come, now, more money.
"What is that, if not obtaining money under false pretense? The law as it now stands in Pennsylvania makes promises to taxpayers which it knows to be false. It says that taxes for schools supersede taxes for jails; and then, and when it has the schools it proceeds to fill the jails by failing to send the children to the schools. Let us have done with cheap prejudice; let us look at the issue squarely and

It will be perceived that Citizen Smith gets his interpretation of the law from what the editor of 'The Tribune thinks 'the law says to Smith.' But the editor makes the law say to Smith things entirely repugnant to both the law and the fact.

The common school law in Pennsyl vania was intended solely to give to all children in the stats an equality of opportunity for rudimentary education. That's all. It does not follow, as The Tribune seems to suppose, that Brown's child will steal because he doesn't know how to spell. Neither is it true that he will go to jail because he does know how to spell. But it is a lamentable error to suppose that knowing how to spell, read, write and cipner is a preventative of crime. This is the error which the Tribune puts into the mouth of the law. The statistics of crime prove that education does not diminish crime. It raises the grade. Brown's ignorant child, who goes to the coalbox. jail for stealing a ham, if he knew how to write might go to jail for forging a Citizen Smith who pays taxes for the support of schools and jafis, is in neither instance a subscriber to a missionary fund. When he undertakes to pay for improved morals he pays his money to the church. Compulsion is out of the question. Even the churches have abandoned that notion. Phila. Record.

Poetical Number Vick's Floral Guide,

It is not a mere advertising dodge, but one of the finest works of the kind ever issued, and should be owned by every person in the land who has a foot of land to cultivate or is in any way interested in growing flowers or vegetables. Mexico Needs Immigrants

People From Northern Europe Would Set a Valuable Example of Thrift.

There is a rumor to the effect that an effort will be made in Mexico to turn the current of European emigration from the United States to that country. There is room in Mexico for many more people, but it is by no means as sparsely inhabited a country as many Americans think, says the Denver Republican. In area it is about one-fourth as great as the United States. Its population is 12,000,000. The same density in the United States would give this country about 48,000,000, which is but 2,000,000 less than the census of 1880 showed our population to be in that year.

Mexico needs a different kind of population, rather than an increase. About one-half the people are full blooded, Indians, and of these one-half are uncivilized. There are about 1,000,000 whites, the majority of whom, of course are of Spanish descent. The remainder, with the exception of a few negroes and Chinese, are of mixed blood, Probably 9,000,000 of the inhabitants have Indian blood in their veins, two thirds of this number being full blood. The hope of the country is, therefore, in the people who have Indian blood. If they shall not develop to a high civilization the country will always be governed by a small class, composed chiefly of the whites.

Fortunately the civilized Indians of full blood are a quiet, orderly people, capable of performing a great deal of labor and attaining to proficiency in the mechanic arts. Juarez, one of the greatest of Mexican statesmen and generals, was a full blood. The hybrids, like hybrids generally, are worse than their parents of either stock and have caused a great deal of trouble. Immigration of a good class from north-ern Europe would do Mexico good, betives. But there is not much induce ment for immigrants of the laboring, mechanic or agricultural classes to settle in Mexico. The demand for labor does not equal the supply, and the farmers would find but poor markets for their products. Mexico is a good country for men with money to invest in mining and other industries requiring large capital, but to immigrants without means the field is not inviting.

Are Winters Colder?

It is often asked, regarding the seasons whether they alter from year to year, whether there is a positive change in climate from century to century.

The general opinion seems to be according to the New York Press, that the springs and summers are cooler than they once were, and that the winters are less cold.

The records of the thermometrical observations show that the temperature of the month of May is diminishing, but that the temperature of the year, taken together, rather tends to in-

His most Catholic Majesty Alfonso XIII, king of Spain, will be 7 years old on May 17. He rejoices in seven names and more titles, military and ecclesiastical, than he can probably remember himself at present. He is a bright little fellow, said those who know him to resemble his father, Alfonso XII, who died before he was born. The little king has always been an interesting object on account of his great devotion to his mother, Queen Christina, regent of the kingdon. She has watched over him with more than a mother's tender care, and has declined to leave Spain even to open the World's Fair, on account of her scruples against leaving the air to the throne. The lit-tle monarch has two sisters, the Infanta Maria, who is 12 years old, and the Infanta İsabella, who is 10.
