Ferdinand de Lesseps.

The Great Engineer—His Triumph at Suez Made His Fall at Panama More Crushing.

In 1854, on the invitation of Said Pasha, the vicerey, a Frenchman went to Egypt. Born at Versailles, almost within the circle of Paris, he was a genuine Parisian, with all the suavity politeness and tact which have become synonymous with the name of those who live in the French metropolises. But he was not merely a man of fashion or pleasure. He was an engineer. He dreamed of executing the great practical works of the ancients. Moreover he was a diplomat. He was accustomed to the atmosphere of courts, and long ago, for Ferdinand de Lesseps was then in middle age, he had learned Talleyrand's maxim that language was given to man as a veil with which to conceal his thoughts. His reputation had gone before him, and Said Pasha, who wished to replace the ancient canal between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, which had been permitted to fill up with sand after the downfall of the Ptolemies, sent for him. It was a scheme that De Lesseps had considered already and he and the Egyptian Vicerey were two men well met.

PEOPLE LAUGHED AT HIM. The scheme aroused all the Frenchman's enthusiasm and he gathered his tools and men to work. Many people laughed at De Lesseps. Some of his own countrymen predicted disastrous failure. John Bull, in particular, frowned on the scheme. But De Lesseps persevered. He had a faithful and potentially in the ruler of Egypt. The vicerey furnished the laborers. There was no trouble on that score. He sent out his officers and brought the men in as fast as De Lesseps wanted them.

From time immemorial the rulers of Egypt had regarded the fellahs as their private property to do with as they chose, and De Lesseps' friend abided by the custom of his predecessors. Pay was not needed. It was sufficient for these men that they must work when the master commanded. It was not a question of reward for work done but for work undone. Labor cost the treasures of Egypt and the Suez Canal Company but little. That was not one of the troubles that De Lesseps must overcome. But De Lesseps and his Egyptian friends conquered all. The fellahs were at his disposal, and there were plenty of people in France who believed in him to furnish money.

All the varied powers of De Lesseps were exercised. The diplomat more than the engineer was needed. There were officers of State who must be satisfied, ministers who must be persuaded and De Lesseps saw all and pacified all. THE SUEZ CANAL OPENED. At last in August, 1869, the waters of the Mediterranean and the Red Sea were mingled in the Bitter Lakes and the canal was opened formally on Nov. 17 of that year, with imposing ceremonies.

Suez spread the fame of De Lesseps, and he was known immediately all over the world as the man who had accomplished the greatest engineering work of modern times. He was decorated by nearly all the sovereigns of Europe. The Paris Geographical Society awarded him the "Empress's Prize" or 10,000 francs, and even crusty old John Bull, who once could see no good in the bold Frenchman, expressed his admiration and presented to him the freedom of the city of London.

Nor was he less known and admired in this country. Very few Americans were unfamiliar with his name and they willingly placed him among the greatest of Frenchmen. He had built the Suez canal. Nobody asked how it was done. It was sufficient that it had been done. It was about this time also that he married a young girl, and soon a numerous family began to grow up about him. His children added to the interest the public felt in him, and all sorts of pretty stories were told in Paris of the old man and his youthful family. After such a triumph and such a victory as this the fall of De Lesseps in the mud of Panama must seem doubly bitter. This man of eighty-seven has been called a robber and a swindler by his own countrymen, and a court has found him guilty of the charges. Panama has been to him more than a failure in finance and engineering. When the investigators began to probe in the mud of Panama and found much there that was rotten, inquisitive people went further back and asked "How about Suez?"

HOW MANY LIVES DID IT COST? But the full truth about Suez will never be ascertained. Just how many of the fellahs perished in the digging of the canal none can tell. It happened too long ago, and there is no one sufficiently interested to begin an inquiry, for Suez was a success and courts do not investigate successes. And in the East they consider a laborer's life a matter of small moment. Had Panama not failed no charge about the manner in which Suez was dug might have been made.

With the failure at Panama the decline of De Lesseps began. Such a fall perhaps could be witnessed nowhere except in France. It is said that De Lesseps has not known the full extent of the Panama investigation. There were many reports in Paris that he was a dotard; that his family concealed the truth from him; that, shut up in his house by his wife and children he spent his time placidly there, still thinking that he was the man of Suez.

For a long time gossip was very loath to attack De Lesseps' name. His reputation was too great, and then the respectable of a man in his old age, surrounded by almost a baker's dozen of children, appealed so forcibly to the French that he remained for awhile untouched, even after the proof had been obtained against his associates at Panama. But by and by the critics sought him out, too. They recalled that De Lesseps was a man of the world. He had grown up in the atmosphere of courts, at a time when the end was believed to justify the means always.

He had been a skillful courtier under republic, kingdom and empire and his enemies began to say he would have hesitated at nothing to secure the success of Panama. They charged, however, that while the thousands of French investors in Panama had lost all, De Lesseps and his son Charles had many million francs in the Bank of England. The family has denied this, but nevertheless it was used as a potent instrument to manufacture public opinion against the old engineer. This old man sentenced to prison in his eighty-eight year, had had many triumphs in his life besides that of Suez, and his career of activity equals Gladstone's.

Bequeathed His Heart to His Wife.

MASCOUTAH, Ill., Feb. 17.—Major Carl Brandt, for many years editor of the Belleville Zeitung, the leading German newspaper in Southern Illinois, died several days ago, living a will, one paragraph of which directed that his heart should be sent to his wife in Germany. He was married in the Fatherland when a young man, but became estranged from his wife and came to this country. He often said, however, that his heart was still true to her and that he would return it to her after death. The heart was taken out and is now being prepared for shipment.

SAVED HIS LIFE

SCROFULA—IMPURE VACCINATION—BEYOND HOPE BUT HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA EFFECTED A PERFECT CURE. "We are sure that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved our son Joseph's life as that the sun shines five years ago on board ship our three boys were vaccinated. Joseph had a very sore arm, so bad at one time that we were afraid it would have to be taken off. At length it seemed to get well, but about two months after, he began to complain of soreness and pain in the vaccinated arm. He had occasionally shown some signs of scrofula, but nothing serious. His arm, however, grew worse and worse and became swollen and covered with sores. The inflammation and sores also spread all over his body, and he was a mass of corruption, PITIABLE TO BEHOLD, A misery to himself and almost breaking our hearts with anguish over his dreadful condition. Many a time did I wish he was dead and out of his misery. "The eruption was especially severe back of his ears and over his head and the lower part of his face. We had to cut off all his hair we could, as it was impossible to comb through the mass of hard crust and matter. Physicians did him no good, and three specialists at the Eye and Ear Hospital said NOTHING COULD BE DONE. They said it was a blood disease caused by impure vaccination. One night I happened to be reading in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and decided to try it. "While taking the first bottle, Joseph did not grow any worse; on the second, we noticed that he was improving, and, slowly but surely, the medicine drove away the disease and won a complete victory. The scales and scabs began to fall off; the sores gradually healed up, and HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA CURES new, smooth and healthy skin formed in place of the disease and corruption. Of course it took time, but improvement was steady until at the end of the year the disease had entirely disappeared, and Joseph stood a strong and healthy boy. He is at school and progressing rapidly in his studies. "We and all the neighbors regard his cure as a perfect miracle." for any case of Rheumatism it fails to cure, if taken, according to directions. Read following testimonials of an eminent Centre county physician. GATESBURG, Centre County, Pa., Aug. 9, 1892 To the N. F. German Rheumatic Cure Co., Tyrone, Pa.

GENTLEMEN—I had suffered with Rheumatism for many years, when, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, your cure was recommended to me. I had tried up myself everything known to me, (I am a doctor of fifty-one years experience) and had despaired of ever being cured. Your remedy was taken according to directions, and after using the second package the disease left me entirely, and no rheumatic pain or ache has troubled me since. I can recommend it without hesitancy to all afflicted with the disease, and being familiar with the ingredients contained in the compound, can recommend them as being non-injurious to the constitution, and as being the most efficient blood remedy known. Truly Yours, DANIEL BATES, M. D.

CONSUMPTION

—CAN BE CURED—

If Dr. Schenck's treatment and cure of Consumption were something new and untried, people might doubt; but what has proved itself through a record as old as our grandfathers, means just what it is. A SPECIFIC FOR CONSUMPTION and for all diseases of the Lungs. No treatment in the world can place as many permanent cures of Consumption to its credit as Dr. Schenck's. Nothing in Nature acts so directly and effectively on the lung membrane and tissues, and so quickly disposes of tubercles, congestion, inflammation, colds, coughs and all the seed of Consumption as DR. SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP.

When all else fails it comes to the rescue. Not until it fails, and only after faithful trial, should any one despair. It has brought the hopeless to life and health. It has turned the despair of ten thousand homes into joy. It is doing it now. It will continue to do it throughout the ages.
